ORGANIZATION.

The amended charter of Bacon College, (founded November, 1836), by which the provisions of the first charter were greatly extended and the name of the institution changed to KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY, bears date January 15, 1858. It was accepted by the Board of Trustees February 2, 1858.

Under the new charter the Collegiate Department was opened in Harrodsburg, Ky., September 19, 1859, with a full faculty, under the Presidency of Robert Milligan.

In the summer of 1865 the University was removed to Lexington, Ky., its present site. Here it acquired the property of Transylvania University, the first literary institution of its grade west of the Alleghanies. To the Academy and the College of Arts, which had existed at Harrodsburg, were now added the College of the Bible and the College of Law.

By an act of the Legislature, approved February 22, 1865, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky was made one of the Colleges of Kentucky University. Its first session began October 1, 1866. This College ceased to be one of the Colleges of Kentucky University by virtue of an act of the Legislature, approved March 13, 1878.

The Commercial College was organized in the summer of 1867, and was opened to students October 7, 1867.

In the summer of 1878 the last session of the College of the Bible closed, and the new College of the Bible took its place. This College is conducted under its own charter and is controlled by its own Board of Trustees.

Transylvania University had its origin in a Seminary, chartered by the Legislature of Virginia, May 1783. The first meeting of its Trustees was held November 10, 1783, near Danville, Ky. Its first session began February 1, 1785. After a few years the Seminary was removed to Lexington, Ky. Its first session in this place began June 1, 1789.

By an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved December 22, 1798, Transylvania Seminary and Kentucky

Academy were united January 1, 1799, under the name of TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY.

After a separate existence of sixty-six years, Transylvania University was consolidated with Kentucky University by an act of the Legislature, approved February 28, 1865, and accepted by the Curators of Kentucky University June 20, 1865.

PROFESSOR KEMPER.

The full course will embrace the following subjects:

Mathematics—The entire course.

Natural Science—Natural Philosophy; Chemistry; Geology; Mineralogy.

In addition to the above, as belonging to the department proper, the following scheme of studies, in two divisions:

FIRST DIVISION.

Free and Mechanical Drawing; Map Drawing; Gillespie's Roads and Railroads; Heuck's Field Book.

SECOND DIVISION.

Descriptive Geometry; Shades, Shadows and Perspective; Strength of Materials; Wheeler's Civil Engineering.

To study successfully the subjects embraced in the first disvision, requires that the student shall have passed through the Freshman Class and the First Term of the Sophomore Class in the School of Mathematics, and for the second division some skill in applying the Differential and Integral Calculus.

RECITATIONS.

Every class recites one hour on recitation days, i. e. on all week days, Saturday excepted.

The number of recitations of each student must, in general, be three daily. More can often be profitably attended, less may be permitted if circumstances warrant.

SELECTION OF CLASSES.

Students are not required to take all their classes in the same year of the Courses, but are permitted, in any particular study, to enter the class for which their attainments in that study qualify them; provided always that this does not create a conflict in their hours of recitation.

SPECIAL COURSES.

Such students as do not intend to take a degree in a regular course, can, with the consent of the Faculty, select their own course of study.

CLASSICAL COURSE.

The CLASSICAL COURSE comprises the studies in all the schools, except the Senior Class in Mathematics, the Second Term of the Senior Year in Natural Science, and the Schools of Modern Languages and Civil Engineering.

SCIENTIFIC COURSE.

The SCIENTIFIC COURSE comprises all the studies in the several schools, except those of Greek, Latin, and Civil Engineering.

COLLEGE OF LAW.

The design of the College of Law is to provide a complete and thorough course of instruction, except in merely local law and practice, for young men preparing for the bar in any part of the United States.

Instruction is given by lectures, with examinations upon them, or by recitations, with familiar expositions by the professors.

The course of study requires two years for its completion. Students will be admitted to the Senior Class upon passing a satisfactory examination in the Junior course, or its equivalent.

A diploma issued by this College is a license to practice law in the Courts of Kentucky, and is granted only after a full written examination.

Students in this College can attend, without charge, the classes of the College of Arts.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

Junior Course.

Blackstone's Commentaries; Smith's on Contracts; Smith's Mercantile Law; Cooley's Principles of Constitutional Law; Stephens on Pleading.

Senior Course.

Kent's Commentaries; Starkey on Evidence; Harris on Criminal Law; Adams's Equity; Chitty on Pleading; Bliss on Code Pleading; Williams on Real and Personal Property.

PROFESSOR HUNT.

Equity, Jurisprudence, and the Law of Contracts.

PROFESSOR FALCONER.

Common Law, Real and Personal Property.

PROFESSOR SHELBY.

Pleading, Evidence, and Practice.

PROFESSOR ALLEN.

Constitutional, Mercantile, and Criminal Law.

All communications should be addressed to Hon. J. D. Hunt, Presiding Officer of the College of Law.

ACADEMY.

R. H. ELLETT, Principal.

W. G. CONLEY, Assistant.

The Academic or Preparatory Course of instruction is designed to fit students for the Freshman Class in the College of Arts.

For entrance into the Academy, applicants must not be less than thirteen years of age; must know the rudiments of Geography, Grammar, and Arithmetic; and must consent to be governed by the University code of discipline Pupils, unless excused, must spend daily in the room of the Principal a required number of hours in study.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

English—Welsh's Lesson in English; Scudder's History of the United States; Study of Words.

:o:

ELOCUTION AND ORATORY.

This department of instruction is in charge of Professor P. K. Dillenbeck, formerly of Kansas City College of Oratory and Elocution. A special fee is charged for instructions in this course.

COLLEGE OF THE BIBLE.

The College of the Bible, under the charter of Kentucky University, is not in operation. Its place is supplied by the new College of the Bible, which, though in administration and control entirely independent of the University, is conducted in connection with it.

The two institutions occupy the same grounds, their class-rooms are in the same building, and their Faculties have some members in common. Students of the College of Arts have access without charge to the classes of the College of the Bible; and on the other hand, matriculates in the latter receive, free of cost, instruction in the classes of the former, or in those of the Academy. Experience has clearly shown that both institutions can thus be conducted in perfect harmony, and with decided advantage to the students of each.

———:o:———

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In this College there are two courses, the Merchant's Scientific Course and the Full Diploma Course. The former requires from five to seven weeks to complete it, the latter from eight to twelve weeks. A separate charge is made for instruction in Phonography, Type-writing and Telegraphy.

The session continues throughout the year. Students can enter at any time. There is no class system, but individual instruction, each pupil advancing as rapidly as he may be able.

Hours of work from 9 A. M to 12 M , 1½ to 4 P. M., and 7 to 8½ P. M.

Students of this college, after the completion of their course, can attend, for the remainder of the session, without charge, the classes of the College of Arts and of the Academy.

RULES OF CONDUCT

FOR STUDENTS IN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY.

It is presumed that every one qualified to enter the University as a student knows the first principles of morality, propriety and decorum, and that it is therefore unnecessary to prescribe a complete code of regulations. But it is required of a student—

1. That he shall study diligently; punctually attend worship, recitations, examinations, and all other University exercises; and that he shall promptly render a reason to the proper officers for delinquency on his part.

2. That he shall neither enter nor leave a class without permission from the Faculty.

3. That he shall treat all persons, and especially the officers of the University, with becoming respect.

4. That he shall not trespass on the premises of any one, and that he shall in no way injure the property of the University.

5. That he shall attend no exhibition of immoral tendency; no racefield, theatre, circus, billiard saloon, bar-room, or tippling-house.

6. That he shall neither introduce upon the premises of the University, nor use there or elsewhere, intoxicating drink; and that he shall not use tobacco in the buildings of the University.

7. That he shall neither keep nor use fire-arms, a dirk, a bowie-knife, or any other deadly weapon.

8. That he shall abstain from profanity, from the desecration of the Lord's day, from gaming for reward or prize of any kind, and from card playing even for amusement; also from whatever else is inconsistent with good order, good taste and good morals.

9. That he shall attend public service at some church every Lord's day, and worship in the Chapel every school day.

10. That he shall not go beyond the immediate precincts of Lexington during the session without permission of the Faculty, or, where this can not be obtained, without the consent of the President.

11. That he shall not leave the University without the special permission of the Faculty, until he is regularly dismissed at the close of the session.

12. That he shall belong to no secret College Society, or association, unless approved by the Faculty.

13. That he shall not change his place of lodging or boarding without permission of the Faculty.

14. That he shall faithfully observe the by-laws adopted by the Faculty for the discipline and government of students.

15. That he shall shun and discountenance disorderly combinations of students or citizens; and that he shall co-operate with the Faculty in every way to promote the interests of the University.

16. That he shall not be noisy in or about the University buildings; and that he shall not play on the grounds except during the hours appointed by the Faculty for recreation, or near the college buildings at any time.

17. That he shall sign no petition or other paper to the Board or the Executive Committee in regard to the government of the University, or to the appointment or dismissal of Professors or officers; and that he shall not attend or give countenance to any meeting to criticise the government of the University.

MISCELLANY.

SESSION, TERMS, COMMENCEMENT.

In the College of Arts and in the Academy, the session, which begins on the second Monday in September and ends on the second Thursday in June, is divided into two equal terms; in the Commercial College the session continues throughout the year.

ADMISSION.

Every applicant for admission must present satisfactory evidence of good moral character; and if previously connected with any other college or academy, a certificate of honorable dismission therefrom.

For admission into the College of Arts, the student must be at least fourteen years of age, and must be qualified for admission to at least one Freshman Class. Applicants not thus prepared will be enrolled as students in the Academy.

To enter the Freshman Class in any school, the candidate should give evidence of a fair acquaintance with the preparatory course (or its equivalent) of that school, as laid down in the Academic Course of Instruction.

LADIES.

The College of Arts is now open to students of both sexes. It is the policy of the University to receive only such young ladies. as students as are ready for the Freshman Class in the School of Mathematics or in the School of English, and are of suitable age; this will not preclude them from attending some classes in the Academy also. The conditions of entering the Freshman year are stated in the previous paragraph.

As the University is not yet provided with a boarding-house for young ladies, only those will be received as students who have or can find a home in the city or vicinity where they can be under a protecting and controlling family care, and such also as are of sufficient age and experience to be safely committed to themselves. Parents and others who desire to send young ladies to the University, are requested to communicate with the President, who will give all desired information.

MATRICULATION.

A student, upon his arrival, should report promptly to the President, with his testimonials of character and standing. He should, as early as practicable, secure suitable board and lodging Failure to observe these regulations may bar his admission.

After successful examination and payment of fees, he will, upon reading a copy of the laws, be entitled to matriculate by signing the following declaration: "I enter the University with a sincere desire to enjoy the benefits of its instructions, and with a determined resolution to conform to its laws.

FEES.

MATRICULATION—College of Arts, $10.00; Academy, $10.00; Commercial College, free.

TUITION—College of Arts, tuiton coupon or $2.00; Commercial College, Merchant's Course, $35.00; Full Diploma Course, $55.00; Academy, tuition coupon or $2.00.

COLLEGE OF LAW—Annual Matriculation, $10.00; Annual tuition, $50.00; Graduation, $5.00.

LABORATORY—Junior Class, $5.00; Senior Class, $10.00, for the use of chemicals. In the former class a deposit of $3.00, in the latter of $5.00, will be required, to cover any damage to apparatus.

All fees are required in advance.

No tuition fee is required in the College of Arts of any student in indigent circumstances that has had one year's experience in teaching, and that intends to make it his profession.

EXAMINATIONS AND REPORTS.

There are two kinds of examinations; first, in connection with the daily lecture or recitation; the second public, at the close of each term.

After examination, a number is placed opposite to the name of the student, designating the value of his exercise. One hundred denotes the highest grade of merit; zero, the lack of any.

From these numbers, the scholarship of each student for the term is ascertained, and a report thereof sent to his parent or guardian, i. e., on the first day of February and at the end of the session. This report also contains an estimate of the student's conduct and a record of his absences.

GRADUATION AND DEGREES.

A student may graduate in any school of the College of Arts on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have been a member of that school at least one year, and shall have completed in a satisfactory manner the studies thereof, or a fair equivalent therefor; the record of his scholarship for each term being not less than seventy-five per centum of a scale on which one hundred denotes perfection.

2. That he shall have habitually observed the rules of the University.

For the degree of Bachelor of Arts, graduation in all the schools of the Classical Course is required.

For the degree of Bachelor of Science, graduation in all the schools of the Scientific Course is required.

A candidate may be admitted to the regular degree of Master of Arts, on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have received, at least one year previous, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

2. That he shall have passed a satisfactory examination in Senior Mathematics, in a course of Historical Study, English or Philosophy, prescribed by the Faculty, and in at least two of the following languages: Hebrew, French, German, Spanish, Italian

3. That he shall have paid ten dollars to the Library Fund.

A candidate may be admitted to the regular degree of Master of Science, on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have received, at least one year previous, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Science

2. That he shall have presented to the Faculty satisfactory evidence of such additional attainments in the School of Mathematics, Philosophy, and Natural Science, as shall fully correspond to a year's study in each of these schools.

3. That he shall have paid ten dollars to the Library Fund.

GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE.

The government of the University, administered by the President and Faculty, aims to maintain such a discipline among the students as will conduce to the good order and prosperity of the institution. The rule of discipline is parental, conducted not with severity, but with strictness There is no forbearance with evil; every element of disorder, as soon as discovered, is at once removed. The President and Professors bear themselves toward the students as friends.

This kind of government has borne its good fruits The University enjoys an enviable reputation for the excellent character of its students and for the general good order prevading it.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL CULTURE.

Every recitation day is opened with religious worship in the Chapel, consisting of reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer. The Professors are present, and attendance on the part of the students is obligatory.

The Bible in English and in the original tongues is a text book in the University.

Students are expected to attend religious services in the churches of the city on Sunday. A large number of them are regularly present at Prayer-meeting during the week, and many are members of Bible Classes that look especially to their religious and spiritual instruction and training.

A Young Men's Christian College Association and a Students' Missionary Society contribute also to awaken and cultivate a religious interest among the students.

A large majority of the students are professing Christians.

PUBLIC LECTURES.

The Kentucky University Lecture Association, which has been in successful operation for several years, contributes much to the intellectual culture and enjoyment of the students. A course of lectures is arranged every session, which brings to the University some of the best lecturing talent of the land. Only such teachers of the platform are invited by the Association as honor and advocate the Christian religion. These lectures have thus far met with remarkable success, and now constitute one of the permanent attractions of the University.

LOCATION.

The College of Arts, the College of the Bible, and the Academy occupy the Transylvania grounds and buildings in the city of Lexington.

This city is situated in the midst of the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, and is noted for its healthfulness and its superior social and religious influences. It affords to students boarding in good private families, and favorable advantages for culture and refinement.

It is easily accessible by several daily trains from Louisville, from Maysville, from Cincinnati, and from the South. It is now also in direct communication with the East by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway.

LIBRARIES.

The Law, the Medical and the Miscellaneous Libraries of the University, comprising about twelve thousand volumes, are open to all its students. The large and valuable Library of the city of Lexington is accessible upon the payment of a small fee; its reading room is free.

APPARATUS AND MUSEUM.

The University has a large and valuable collection of Chemical, Philosophical and Astronomical Apparatus, and a Museum containing an extensive collection of Anatomical, Geological and Mineral specimens and objects of Natural History, all well adapted to the purpose of illustration and instruction in its Schools of Science.

SOCIETIES.

In the College of Arts are two Literary Societies, the Cecropian and the Periclean. They have their respective halls and libraries, and their weekly exercises add to the facilities afforded for practice in composition, elocution and discussion.

BOARDING.

A student can select his house for boarding and lodging, subject in all cases to the approval of the Faculty. He can not, however, board or lodge in any house in which intoxicating liquors are sold, or card playing or billiard playing is practiced, or the rules of good order and decorum are, in any respect, disregarded. In private families, the weekly cost of boarding, fuel, light and the use of furnished rooms, varies from $3.00 to $5.00.

FINANCES.—FORMS OF BEQUESTS.

The finances of the University are in a prosperous condition, and all its obligations are fully and promptly met. But to enlarge the sphere of instruction in harmony with the demands of the times for higher education, the Board of Curators has resolved at once to make a vigorous effort "to raise an additional $75,000 to increase the endowment and for other purposes." It is to be hoped that the generous friends of the University will meet, with a magnanimous liberality, this noble ambition on the part of the Curators.

Institutions of learning have very often received large donations from bequests. There are, therefore, subjoined here general and special forms of bequests, both as incentives and directions to such friends of the University as may desire to remember it liberally in their wills.

FORMS OF BEQUESTS.

GENERAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of ..... dollars, to be applied at the discretion of the Curators for the general purposes of the University.

SPECIAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of ..... dollars, to be invested by the Curators as an endowment for the support of (a professorship or some object designated in the bequest) "

GENERAL DESIGN OF THE COLLEGE.

The design of this Institution is to prepare young men for usefulness in the Church by furnishing them with systematic instruction in the Word of God in both the English version and the original tongues, and with an accurate knowledge of the higher branches of English Literature and of Philosophy. While its course of study is especially adapted to those who intend to become preachers of the gospel, it is not a professional school, its classes being open to all religious young men who wish to extend their knowledge of the Scriptures.

SPECIAL DESIGN OF EACH DEPARTMENT.

I. The English.—There are many pious young men who have neither the time nor the means to obtain a classical education, but yet have a desire and the ability to be very useful in the ministry; and it is the special design of this department to afford to such an opportunity to become well acquainted with the English Language and its Literature. They are also taught the history of England, with special reference to the development of the mind and language of the nation.

A student who reads, writes and spells well, and who has a good knowledge of Arithmetic, Geography, History and English Grammar, can enter the Freshman class, in which for one year he is drilled in the structure of his mother tongue.

In the Junior class the student spends one year in Rhetoric and Composition, special attention being paid to the latter; as fast as principles are learned they are practically applied in oral and written exercises, and this is kept up through the whole session. Particular attention is given to the History of England.

The Senior Year completes the course in English, and is devoted to Literature proper and Criticism. It is the aim to make the student familiar with the intellectual achievements of English and American authors from Chaucer to the present time, and to show him how to apply critically what he has already learned. Instruction in reading and elocution, with practical exercises, is given during the session.

II. Sacred History.—The design of this department is twofold; first, to lay a solid foundation in the knowledge of the historical facts of the Bible for all subsequent advances in Biblical study; and second, to make the student familiar with a large amount of material suitable for discourses and illustrations. Incidentally, the faith of the student is strengthened by making him acquainted with the actual contents of the Bible.

To attain the ends just stated, the course of study in Sacred History is more extended than in other colleges of like character. It includes all the historical books of both the Old Testament and the New, together with all the historical information to be gleaned from the other sacred books, and the subsidiary information found in secular history.

The method of instruction is by lectures, and these are followed by recitations in which the matter of the lectures and of the text is reproduced by the student. Every book is distributed into its natural divisions of Parts, Sections and Paragraphs, all of which are studied both separately and connectedly, so that when a book is completed its whole structure and design are understood. As far as may be, all obscure passages are made clear, and apparent discrepancies are reconciled. Special attention is given to Geography and Topography, and for the purpose of illustrating these topics, the department is furnished with a first-class Stereopticon and a set of slides, representing, in large and brilliant pictures, the localities in which the events of the sacred narrative transpired. The course in Evidences is in part coincident with that in Sacred History; for the internal proofs of authenticity and those found in contemporary history are constantly pointed out; but the entire course of Sacred History is followed by a special course in Evidences, occupying one whole term.

The Freshman Year is devoted to the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges and Ruth. The Law of Moses is studied systematically. This is both important in itself, and indispensable to the proper understanding of many passages in the later books of the Bible. The statutes of the Law, both civil and religious, are properly classified according to the distinctions employed in modern statute books.

The studies of the Sophomore Year cover a much neglected, but exceedingly important portion of Sacred History. No part of the Bible furnishes so many illustrations of the divine government and of the practical working of sin and redemption among men. The preacher familiar with it has an inexhaustible fund from which to draw while enforcing the claims of religion on mankind.

The members of the Junior class are required to memorize the text carefully, except in a few passages, so that they may always have it at command. They study the matter and structure of each book separately so as to appreciate its distinctive peculiarities, and then combine the information contained in all by means of a review, in which the events are considered in their chronological order, so far as this can be ascertained. The character and claims of Jesus are kept constantly in view.

The first term of the Senior Year is employed in studying the development and spread of the Church as given in Acts of Apostles, the controversial questions which have arisen in connection with its teaching, the chronology of the book, and the historical matter found in the Epistles. The second term is spent in discussing the Evidences, including an inquiry into the Preservation of the Text of the Scriptures, the History of the Canonical books, and the Proofs of their Inspiration. Books of reference throughout this course: The Works of Josephus, a Bible Atlas, and McGarvey's Lands of the Bible.

III. Sacred Literature.—In this department the student of the English Scriptures obtains a knowledge of Christian doctrine and the principles of Biblical interpretation. In its Classical Course he receives instruction in the Hebrew language and in Greek Exegesis.

In the Sophomore Year thorough instruction is given in the whole scheme of Redemption as taught in the Holy Scriptures, followed by lectures on Ecclesiastical History, including that of doctrines schisms, and sects from the death of Christ till the present time.

The Junior Year is devoted to Hermeneutics. In the application of the principles of interpretation there are two distinct features; first, the exegetical analysis of the Scriptures into sections, paragraphs, elements of thought, sub-elements, etc.; and, second, exegetical discussion at the end of paragraphs containing words or expressions which demand additional explanation. In these processes free use is made of the assistance afforded by the labors of such exegetes as Meyer, Tholuck, Alford, Lange, Bengel and others, at the same time the student is carefully guarded against all deference to authorities that would preclude an independent examination of the text itself, and an unbiased application of the principles of Hermeneutics, by which all alike must be governed.

The Senior Year is spent in fitting the preacher for his life work. This includes the preparation and delivery of sermons, discussion of topics, pastoral work, choice of books, etc.; in a word, the whole subject of Homiletics.

IV. Philosophy.—The purpose of this department is to make the preacher thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the human intellect; to furnish him with the weapons to be used in defending the faith and assailing the strongholds of error, and to show him how to lay open the secret springs of the Heart and Will so as to lead both to the obedience of the gospel. There is a philosophy, falsely so called, that in many places is sapping the foundations of religion, and the preacher of to-day must be able to meet the assailants in their own way, as they secretly as well as openly work their approaches to the citadel of divine truth. He can do this only by understanding his Bible on the one hand and the human mind on the other. The information and mental discipline acquired in this department are in utility to the preacher second only to his knowledge of the Word of God.

VOCAL MUSIC.

It has been the purpose of the College from the beginning to furnish instruction in vocal music to all of its students, and something has been accomplished in this way, but for want of funds no regular music teacher has been appointed. This department is now under the charge of a competent teacher, whose superior qualifications are well known throughout the West. It will be necessary for the present to charge a small fee for this instruction.

3. He must stand an examination in Reading, Spelling, Arithmetic, Geography, History of the United States, and English Grammar.

No tution fees are charged, but every student pays a janitor's fee of ten dollars, and those who occupy rooms in the College Halls pay ten dollars for room rent. All the foregoing requirements will be rigidly enforced.

ACCOMMODATIONS AND EXPENSES.

Boarding can be obtained in private families at from $3.00 to $4.00 per week, including all expenses except washing. But arrangements have been made by which students can board in clubs at from $1.50 to $2.00 per week, exclusive of washing, fuel and lights. For the accommodation of students in this respect, we have the exclusive use of three College Halls on the campus. The rooms, forty in number, have been comfortably fitted up for occupation by students.

Each occupant of a room is required to share with his roommates the expense of furnishing it. But this is made light by the fact that it is incurred but once, and the furniture can always be sold when no longer needed. No rooms are engaged to new students before their matriculation.

The entire expense per annum of students who occupy rooms in the Halls, may be set down as follows.

Janitor's Fee	$10 00
Room Rent	10 00
Club Fees (payable weekly)	70 00
Washing, Fuel, Lights	20 00
Books, Stationery, etc	20 00
Total	$130 00

The Classes of the College of the Bible are taught in the same building with those of the College of Science, Literature and Arts. Our students are admitted without charge to any of the classes in that College, and thus an opportunity is afforded them of prosecuting literary and scientific studies simultaneously with the study of the Word of God; and in addition to their own, they have free access to the large library of the University. Their own literary societies (The Philothean and Phileusebian) afford ample opportunity for self-improvement to all who become members of them.

It is earnestly desired that all who intend to enter the College be present at the opening of the session.

ORGANIZATION.

The amended charter of Bacon College (founded November, 1836), by which the provisions of the first charter were greatly extended and the name of the institution changed to KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY, bears date January 15, 1858. It was accepted by the Board of Trustees February 2, 1858.

Under the new charter the Collegiate Department was opened in Harrodsburg, Ky., September 19, 1859, with a full faculty, under the Presidency of Robert Milligan.

In the summer of 1865 the University was removed to Lexington, Ky., its present site. Here it acquired the property of Transylvania University, the first literary institution of its grade west of the Alleghanies. To the Academy and the College of Arts, which had existed at Harrodsburg, were now added the College of the Bible and the College of Law.

By an act of the Legislature, approved February 22, 1865, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky was made one of the colleges of Kentucky University. Its first session began October 1, 1866. This College ceased to be one of the colleges of Kentucky University by virtue of an act of the Legislature, approved March 13, 1878.

The Commercial College was organized in the summer of 1867, and was opened to students October 7, 1867.

In the summer of 1878 the last session of the College of the Bible closed, and the new College of the Bible took its place. This College is conducted under its own charter and is controlled by its own Board of Trustees.

Transylvania University had its origin in a Seminary, chartered by the Legislature of Virginia, May, 1783. The first meeting of its Trustees was held November 10, 1783, near Danville, Ky. Its first session began February 1, 1785. After a few years the Seminary was removed to Lexington, Ky. Its first session in this place began June 1, 1789.

By an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved December 22, 1798, Transylvania Seminary and Kentucky Academy were united January 1, 1799, under the name of TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY.

After a separate existence of sixty-six years, Transylvania University was consolidated with Kentucky University by an act of the Legislature, approved February 28, 1865, and accepted by the Curators of Kentucky University June 20, 1865.

IX. School of Civil Engineering.

PROFESSOR KEMPER.

The full course will embrace the following subjects:

Mathematics—The entire course.

Natural Science—Natural Philosophy: Chemistry; Geology; Mineralogy.

In addition to the above, as belonging to the department proper, the following scheme of studies, in two divisions:

FIRST DIVISION.

Free and Mechanical Drawing; Map Drawing; Gillespie's Roads and Railroads; Henck's Field Book.

SECOND DIVISION.

Church's Descriptive Geometry; Shades, Shadows and Perspective; Merriman's Mechanics of Materials; Wheeler's Civil Engineering.

To study successfully the subjects embraced in the first division, requires that the student shall have passed through the Freshman Class and the First Term of the Sophomore Class in the School of Mathematics, and for the second division some skill in applying the Differential and Integral Calculus.

RECITATIONS.

Every class recites one hour on recitation days, i. e. on all week days, Saturday excepted.

The number of recitations of each student must, in general, be three daily. More can often be profitably attended, less may be permitted if circumstances warrant.

SELECTION OF CLASSES.

Students are not required to take all their classes in the same year of the courses, but are permitted, in any particular study, to enter the class for which their attainments in that study qualify them; provided always that this does not create a conflict in their hours of recitation.

SPECIAL COURSES.

Such students as do not intend to take a degree in a regular course can, with the consent of the Faculty, select their own course of study.

CLASSICAL COURSE.

The CLASSICAL COURSE comprises the studies in all the schools, except the Senior Class in Mathematics, the Second Term of the Senior Year in Natural Science, and the Schools of Modern Languages and Civil Engineering.

SCIENTIFIC COURSE.

The SCIENTIFIC COURSE comprises all the studies in the several schools, except those of Greek, Latin, and Civil Engineering.

COLLEGE OF LAW.

The design of the College of Law is to provide a complete and thorough course of instruction, except in merely local law and practice, for young men preparing for the bar in any part of the United States.

Instruction is given by lectures, with examinations upon them, or by recitations, with familiar expositions by the professors.

The course of study requires two years for its completion. Students will be admitted to the Senior Class upon passing a satisfactory examination in the Junior Course, or its equivalent.

A diploma issued by this College is a license to practice law in the Courts of Kentucky, and is granted only after a full written examination.

Students in this College can attend, without charge, the classes of the College of Arts.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

Junior Course.

Blackstone's Commentaries; Smith on Contracts; Smith's Mercantile Law; Cooley's Principles of Constitutional Law; Stephens on Pleading.

Senior Course.

Kent's Commentaries: Starkey on Evidence; Harris on Criminal Law: Adams's Equity; Chitty on Pleading; Bliss on Code Pleading; Williams on Real and Personal Property.

PROFESSOR HUNT.
Equity, Jurisprudence, and the Law of Contracts.

PROFESSOR FALCONER.
Common Law, Real and Personal Property.

PROFESSOR SHELBY.
Pleading, Evidence, and Practice.

PROFESSOR ALLEN.
Constitutional, Mercantile, and Criminal Law.

All communications should be addressed to Hon. J. D. Hunt, Presiding Officer of the College of Law.

ACADEMY.

R. H. ELLETT, PRINCIPAL.
W. G. CONLEY, ASSISTANT.
F. F. GREEN, SECOND ASSISTANT.

The Academic or Preparatory Course of instruction is designed to fit students for the Freshman Class in the College of Arts.

For entrance into the Academy, applicants must not be less than thirteen years of age; must know the rudiments of Geography, Grammar, and Arithmetic; and must consent to be governed by the University code of discipline. Pupils, unless excused, must spend daily in the room of the Principal a required number of hours in study.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

ENGLISH—Welsh's Lessons in English; Scudder's History of the United States; Study of Words.

MATHEMATICS—Peck's Arithmetic; Peck's Algebra begun.

LATIN—Allen & Greenough's Grammar: Exercises at the blackboard in writing Latin, with quantities marked; Cæsar begun.

GREEK—Goodwin's Grammar: White's First Lessons; Goodwin's Selections from Xenophon and Herodotus.

GEOGRAPHY—Ancient (Mitchell's). Modern (Harper's).

NATURAL SCIENCE—Physical Geography (Houston's)

ELOCUTION AND ORATORY.

This department is in charge of Professor P. K Dillenbeck. For instruction in this course, which is continuous through the session, a special fee is charged.

COLLEGE OF THE BIBLE.

The College of the Bible under the charter of Kentucky University is not in operation. Its place is supplied by the new College of the Bible, which, though in administration and control entirely independent of the University, is conducted in connection with it.

The two institutions occupy the same grounds, their classrooms are in the same building, and their Faculties have some members in common. Students of the College of Arts have access without charge to the classes of the College of the Bible. and on the other hand, matriculates in the latter receive, free of cost, instruction in the classes of the former, or in those of the Academy. Experience has clearly shown that both institutions can thus be conducted in perfect harmony, and with decided advantage to the students of each.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In this College there are two courses, the Merchant's Scientific Course and the Full Diploma Course. The former requires from five to seven weeks to complete it, the latter from eight to twelve weeks. A separate charge is made for instruction in Phonography, Type-writing, and Telegraphy.

The session continues throughout the year. Students can enter at any time. There is no class system, but individual instruction, each pupil advancing as rapidly as he may be able.

Hours of work from 9 A. M. to 12 M., 1½ to 4 P. M., and 7 to 8½ P. M.

Students of this college, after the completion of their course, can attend, for the remainder of the session, without charge, the classes of the College of Arts and of the Academy.

RULES OF CONDUCT

FOR STUDENTS IN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY.

It is presumed that every one qualified to enter the University as a student knows the first principles of morality, propriety and decorum, and that it is therefore unnecessary to prescribe a complete code of regulations. But it is required of a student—

1. That he shall study diligently; punctually attend worship, recitations, examinations, and all other University exercises; and that he shall promptly render a reason to the proper officers for delinquency on his part.

2. That he shall neither enter nor leave a class without permission from the Faculty.

3. That he shall treat all persons, and especially the officers of the University, with becoming respect.

4. That he shall not trespass on the premises of any one, and that he shall in no way injure the property of the University.

5. That he shall attend no exhibition of immoral tendency; no racefield, theatre, circus, billiard saloon, bar-room, or tippling-house.

6. That he shall neither introduce upon the premises of the University, nor use there or elsewhere, intoxicating drink; and that he shall not use tobacco in the buildings of the University.

7. That he shall neither keep nor use fire-arms, a dirk, a bowie-knife, or any other deadly weapon.

8. That he shall abstain from profanity, from the desecration of the Lord's day, from gaming for reward or prize of any kind, and from card playing even for amusement; also from whatever else is consistent with good order, good taste and good morals.

9. That he shall attend public service at some church every Lord's day, and worship in the Chapel every school day.

10. That he shall not go beyond the immediate precincts of Lexington during the session without permission of the Faculty, or, where this can not be obtained, without the consent of the President.

11. That he shall not leave the University without the special permission of the Faculty, until he is regularly dismissed at the close of the session.

12. That he shall belong to no secret College Society or association, unless approved by the Faculty.

13. That he shall not change his place of lodging or boarding without permission of the Faculty.

14. That he shall faithfully observe the by-laws adopted by the Faculty for the discipline and government of students.

15. That he shall shun and discountenance disorderly combinations of students or citizens; and that he shall co-operate with the Faculty in every way to promote the interests of the University.

16 That he shall not be noisy in or about the University buildings; and that he shall not play on the grounds except during the hours appointed by the Faculty for recreation, or near the college buildings at any time.

17. That he shall sign no petition or other paper to the Board or the Executive Committee in regard to the government of the University, or to the appointment or dismissal of professors or officers; and that he shall not attend or give countenance to any meeting to criticise the government of the University.

MISCELLANY.

SESSION, TERMS, COMMENCEMENT.

In the College of Arts and in the Academy the session, which begins on the second Monday in September and ends on the second Thursday in June, is divided into two equal terms; in the Commercial College the session continues throughout the year.

ADMISSION.

Every applicant for admission must present satisfactory evidence of good moral character; and if previously connected with any other college or academy, a certificate of honorable dismission therefrom.

For admission into the College of Arts, the student must be at least fourteen years of age, and must be qualified for admission to at least one Freshman Class. Applicants not thus prepared will be enrolled as students in the Academy.

To enter the Freshman Class in any school, the candidate should give evidence of a fair acquaintance with the preparatory course (or its equivalent) of that school, as laid down in the Academic Course of Instruction.

WOMEN.

The College of Arts is now open to students of both sexes. It is the policy of the University to receive only such young women as students as are ready for the Freshman Class in the School of Mathematics or in the School of English, and are of suitable age; this will not preclude them from attending some classes in the Academy also. The conditions of entering the Freshman year are stated in the previous paragraph.

As the University is not yet provided with a boarding-house for young women, only those will be received as students who have or can find a home in the city or vicinity where they can be under a protecting and controlling family care, and such also as are of sufficient age and experience to be safely committed to themselves. Parents and others who desire to send young women to the University are requested to communicate with the President, who will give all desired information.

MATRICULATION.

A student, upon his arrival. should report promptly to the President, with his testimonials of character and standing. He should, as early as practicable, secure suitable board and lodging. Failure to observe these regulations may bar his admission.

After successful examination and payment of fees he will, upon reading a copy of the laws, be entitled to matriculate by signing the following declaration: "I enter the University with a sincere desire to enjoy the benefits of its instruction, and with a determined resolution to conform to its laws."

FEES.

Matriculation—College of Arts, $10.00; Academy, $10,00; Commercial College, free.

Tuition—College of Arts, tuition coupon or $2.00; Commercial College, Merchant's Course, $35.00; Full Diploma Course, $55.00; Academy, tuition coupon or $2.00.

College of Law—Annual Matriculation, $10.00; Annual tuition, $50.00; Graduation, $5.00.

Laboratory—Junior Class, $5.00; Senior Class, $10.00, for the use of chemicals. In the former class a deposit of $3.00, in the latter of $5.00, will be required, to cover any damage to apparatus.

All fees are required in advance.

No tuition fee is required in the College of Arts of any student in indigent circumstances that has had one year's experience in teaching, and that intends to make it his profession.

EXAMINATIONS AND REPORTS.

There are two kinds of examinations; first, in connection with the daily lecture or recitation; the second public, at the close of each term.

After examination, a number is placed opposite to the name of the student, designating the value of his exercise. One hundred denotes the highest grade of merit; zero the lack of any.

From these numbers, the scholarship of each student for the term is ascertained, and a report thereof sent to his parent or guardian, i. e., on the first day of February and at the end of the session. This report also contains an estimate of the student's conduct and a record of his absences.

GRADUATION AND DEGREES.

A student may graduate in any school of the College of Arts on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have been a member of that school at least one year, and shall have completed in a satisfactory manner the studies thereof, or a fair equivalent therefor; the record of his scholarship for each term being not less than seventy-five per centum of a scale on which one hundred denotes perfection.

2. That he shall have habitually observed the rules of the University.

For the degree of Bachelor of Arts, graduation in all the schools of the Classical Course is required.

For the degree of Bachelor of Science, graduation in all the schools of the Scientific Course is required.

A candidate may be admitted to the regular degree of Master of Arts, on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have received, at least one year previous, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

2. That he shall have passed a satisfactory examination in Senior Mathematics, in a course of Historical Study, English, or Philosophy, prescribed by the Faculty, and in at least two of the following languages: Hebrew, French, German, Spanish, Italian.

3. That he shall have paid ten dollars to the Library Fund.

A candidate may be admitted to the regular degree of Master of Science, on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have received, at least one year previous, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Science.

2. That he shall have presented to the Faculty satisfactory evidence of such additional attainments in the School of Mathematics, Philosophy, and Natural Science, as shall fully correspond to a year's study in each of these schools.

3. That he shall have paid ten dollars to the Library Fund.

GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE.

The government of the University, administered by the President and Faculty, aims to maintain such a discipline among the students as will conduce to the good order and prosperity of the institution. The rule of discipline is parental, conducted not with severity, but with strictness. There is no forbearance with evil; every element of disorder, as soon as discovered, is at once removed. The President and Professors bear themselves toward the students as friends.

This kind of government has borne its good fruits. The University enjoys an enviable reputation for the excellent character of its students and for the general good order pervading it.

RELICIOUS AND MORAL CULTURE.

Every recitation day is opened with religious worship in the Chapel, consisting of reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer. The professors are present, and attendance on the part of the students is obligatory.

The Bible in English and in the original tongues is a text book in the University.

Students are expected to attend religious services in the churches of the city on Sunday. A large number of them are regularly present at prayer-meeting during the week, and many are members of Bible Classes that look especially to their religious and spiritual instruction and training.

A College Young Men's Christian Association and a Students' Missionary Society contribute also to awaken and cultivate a religious interest among the students.

A large majority of the students are professing Christians.

PUBLIC LECTURES.

The Kentucky University Lecture Association, which has been in successful operation for several years, contributes much to the intellectual culture and enjoyment of the students. A course of lectures is arranged every session, which brings to the University some of the best lecturing talent of the land. Only such teachers of the platform are invited by the Association as honor and advocate the Christian religion. These lectures have thus far met with remarkable success, and now constitute one of the permanent attractions of the University.

LOCATION.

The College of Arts, the College of the Bible, and the Academy occupy the Transylvania grounds and buildings in the city of Lexington.

This city is situated in the midst of the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, and is noted for its healthfulness and its superior social and religious influences. It affords to students boarding in good private families, and favorable advantages for culture and refinement.

It is easily accessible by several daily trains from Louisville, from Maysville, from Cincinnati, and from the South. It is now also in direct communication with the East by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway.

LIBRARIES.

The Law, the Medical, and the Miscellaneous Libraries of the University, comprising about twelve thousand volumes, are open to all its students. The large and valuable Library of the city of Lexington is accessible upon the payment of a small fee; its reading-room is free.

APPARATUS AND MUSEUM.

The University has a large and valuable collection of Chemical, Philosophical, and Astronomical Apparatus, and a Museum containing an extensive collection of Anatomical, Geological, and Mineral specimens and objects of Natural History, all well adapted to the purpose of illustration and instruction in its Schools of Science.

SOCIETIES.

In the College of Arts are three Literary Societies, the Cecropian, the Periclean, and the Ossolian. They have their halls and libraries, and their weekly exercises add to the facilities afforded for practice in composition, elocution, and discussion.

BOARDING.

A student can select his house for boarding and lodging, subject in all cases to the approval of the Faculty. He can not, however, board or lodge in any house in which intoxicating liquors are sold, or card playing or billiard playing is practiced, or the rules of good order and decorum are, in any respect, disregarded. In private families, the weekly cost of boarding, fuel, light and the use of furnished rooms, varies from $3.00 to $5.00.

FINANCE.

The finances of the University are in a prosperous condition, and all its obligations are fully and promptly met. But to enlarge the sphere of instruction in harmony with the demands of the times for higher education, the Board of Curators has resolved to make a vigorous effort to raise additional endowment.

To this end and to present the claims of the University in other respects to its friends and to those who may desire its benefits, Curator John S. Shouse, who is most widely and favorably known, and whose efficient devotion to the welfare of the University has been abundantly attested, was, at a special meeting of the Board, appointed General Solicitor. He has already entered on his work, in which it is hoped that he will receive the active encouragement of the friends of liberal education, not only in Kentucky, but throughout the West and South.

BEQUESTS.

Institutions of learning have very often received large donations from bequests. There are, therefore, subjoined here general and special forms of bequests, both as incentives and directions to such friends of the University as may desire to remember it liberally in their wills.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

GENERAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of .....dollars, to be applied at the discretion of the Curators for the general purposes of the University.

SPECIAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of .....dollars, to be invested by the Curators as an endowment for the support of (a professorship or some object designated in the bequest)."

GENERAL DESIGN OF THE COLLEGE.

The design of this Institution is to prepare young men for usefulness in the Church by furnishing them with systematic instruction in the Word of God in both the English version and the original tongues, and with an accurate knowledge of the higher branches of English Literature and of Philosophy, While its course of study is especially adapted to those who intend to become preachers of the gospel, it is not a professional school, its classes being open to all religious young men who wish to extend their knowledge of the Scriptures.

SPECIAL DESIGN OF EACH DEPARTMENT.

I. The English.—There are many pious young men who have neither the time nor the means to obtain a classical education, but yet have a desire and the ability to be very useful in the ministry; and it is the special design of this department to afford to such an opportunity to become well acquainted with the English Language and its literature. They are also taught the history of England, with special reference to the development of the mind and language of the nation.

A student who reads, writes and spells well, and who has a good knowledge of Arithmetic, Geography, History and English Grammar, can enter the Freshman class, in which for one year he is drilled in the structure of his mother tongue.

In the Junior class the student spends one year in Rhetoric and Composition, special attention beiug paid to the latter; as fast as principles are learned they are practically applied in oral and written exercises, and this is kept up through the whole session. Particular attention is given to the History of England.

The Senior Year completes the course in English, and is devoted to Literature proper and Criticism. It is the aim to make the student familiar with the intellectual achievements of English and American authors from Chaucer to the present time, and to show him how to apply critically what he has already learned. Instruction in reading and elocution, with practical exercises, is given during the session.

II. Sacred History.—The design of this department is two-fold; first, to lay a solid foundation in the knowledge of the historical facts of the Bible for all subsequent advances in Biblical study; and second, to make the student familiar with a large amount of material suitable for discourses and illustrations. Incidentally, the faith of the student is strengthened by making him acquainted with the actual contents of the Bible.

To attain the ends just stated, the course of study in Sacred History is more extended than in other colleges of like character. It includes all the historical books of both the Old Testament and the New, together with all the historical information to be gleaned from the other sacred books, and the subsidiary information found in secular history.

The method of instruction is by lectures, and these are followed by recitations in which the matter of the lectures and of the text is reproduced by the student. Every book is distributed into its natural divisions of Parts, Sections and Paragraphs, all of which are studied both separately and connectedly, so that when a book is completed its whole structure and design are understood. As far as may be, all obscure passages are made clear, and apparent discrepancies are reconciled. Special attention is given to Geography and Topography, and for the purpose of illustrating these topics, the department is furnished with a first-class Stereopticon and a set of slides, representing, in large and brilliant pictures, the localities in which the events of the sacred narrative transpired. The course in Evidences is in part coincident with that in Sacred History; for the internal proofs of authenticity and those found in contemporary history are constantly pointed out, but the entire course of Sacred History is followed by a special course in Evidences, occupying one whole term.

The Freshman Year is devoted to the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges and Ruth. The Law of Moses is studied systematically. This is both important in itself, and indispensable to the proper understanding of many passages in the later books of the Bible. The statutes of the Law, both civil and religious, are properly classified according to the distinctions employed in modern statute books.

The studies of the Sophomore Year cover a much neglected, but exceedingly important portion of Sacred History. No part of the Bible furnishes so many illustrations of the divine government and of the practical working of sin and redemption among men. The preacher familiar with it has an inexhaustible fund from which to draw while enforcing the claims of religion on mankind.

The members of the Senior class are required to memorize the text carefully, except in a few passages, so that they may always have it at command They study the matter and structure of each book separately, so as to appreciate its destinctive peculiarities, and then combine the information contained in all by means of a review, in which the events are considered in their chronological order, so far as this can be ascertained. The character and claims of Jesus are kept constantly in view.

The first term of the Senior Year is employed in studying the development and spread of the Church as given in Acts of Apostles, the controversial questions which have arisen in connection with its teaching, the chronology of the book, and the historical matter found in the Epistles. The second term is spent in discussing the Evidences, including an inquiry into the Preservation of the Text of the Scriptures, the History of the Canonical books, and the Proofs of their Inspiration. Books of reference throughout this course: The Works of Josephus, a Bible Atlas, and McGarvey's Lands of the Bible.

III. Sacred Literature.—In this department the student of the English Scriptures obtains a knowledge of Christian doctrine and the principles of Biblical interpretation. In its Classical Course he receives instruction in the Hebrew language and in Greek Exegesis.

In the Sophomore Year thorough instruction is given in the whole scheme of Redemption as taught in the Holy Scriptures, followed by lectures on Ecclesiastical History, including that of doctrines, schisms, and sects from the death of Christ till the present time.

The Junior Year is devoted to Hermeneutics. In these application of the principles of interpretation there are two distinct features; first. the exegetical analysis of the Scriptures into sections, paragraphs, elements of thought, sub-elements, etc.; and, second. exegetical discussion at the end of paragraphs containing words or expressions which demand additional explanation. In these processes free use is made of the assistance afforded by the labors of such exegetes as Meyer, Tholuck, Alford, Lange, Bengel and others, at the same time the student is carefully guarded against all deference to authorities that would preclude an independent examination of the text itself, and an unbiased application of the principles of Hermeneutics, by which all alike must be governed.

The Senior Year is spent in fitting the preacher for his life work. This includes the preparation and delivery of sermons, discussion of topics, pastoral work, choice of books, etc.; in a word, the whole subject of Homiletics.

IV. Philosophy.—The purpose of this department is to make the preacher thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the human intellect; to furnish him with the weapons to be used in defending the faith and assailing the strongholds of error, and to show him how to lay open the secret springs of the Heart and Will so as to lead both to the obedience of the gospel. There is a philosophy, falsely so called, that in many places is sapping the foundations of religion, and the preacher of to-day must be able to meet the assailants in their own way, as they secretly as well as openly work their approaches to the citadel of divine truth. He can do this only by understanding his Bible on the one hand and the human mind on the other. The information and mental discipline acquired in this department are in utility to the preacher second only to his knowledge of the Word of God.

VOCAL MUSIC.

It has been the purpose of the College from the beginning to furnish instruction in vocal music to all of its students, and something has been accomplished in this way, but for want of funds no regular music teacher has been appointed. This department is now under the charge of a competent teacher, whose superior qualifications are well known throughout the West. It will be necessary for the present to charge a small fee for this instruction.

———o———

ACCOMMODATIONS AND EXPENSES.

Boarding can be obtained in private families at from $3.00 to $4.00 per week, including all expenses except washing. But arrangements have been made by which students can board in clubs at from $1.50 to $2.00 per week, exclusive of washing, fuel and lights. For the accomodation of students in this respect, we have the exclusive use of three College Halls on the campus. The rooms, forty in number, have been comfortably fitted up for occupation by students.

Each occupant of a room is required to share with his roommates the expense of furnishing it. But this is made light by the fact that it is incurred but once, and the furniture can always by sold when no longer needed. No rooms are engaged to new students before their matriculation.

The entire expense per annum of students who occupy rooms in the Halls, may be set down as follows:

Janitor's Fee	$10 00
Room Rent	10 00
Club Fees (payable weekly)	70 00
Washing, Fuel, Lights	20 00
Books, Stationery, etc.	20 00
Total	$130 00

The Classes of the College of the Bible are taught in the same building with those of the College of Science, Literature and Arts. Our students are admitted without charge to any of the classes in that College, and thus an opportunity is afforded them of prosecuting literary and scientific studies simultaneously with the study of the Word of God; and in addition to their own, they have free access to the large library of the University. Their own literary societies (The Philothean and Phileusebian) afford ample opportunity for self-improvement to all who become members of them.

It is earnestly desired that all who intend to enter the College be present at the opening of the session.

HISTORY.

Bacon College, the earliest literary institution of its grade established by the Disciples of Christ, began its first session in Georgetown, Ky. November 7, 1836. Its charter, granted at the next session of the Legislature, was approved February 23, 1837.

In the summer of 1839, the institution was removed to Harrodsburg, Ky. Beginning its first session in that place September 2nd, 1839, it was conducted there until failure of means led to its suspension in the summer of 1850.

The amended charter of Bacon College, by which the provisions of the first charter were greatly extended and the name of the institution changed to KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY, was approved January 15, 1858. It was accepted by the Board of Trustees February 2, 1858.

Under the new charter the Collegiate Department was opened in Harrodsburg, Ky. September 19, 1859, with a full faculty, under the presidency of Robert Milligan.

In the summer of 1865, the University was removed to Lexington, Ky., its present site, where it acquired the property of Transylvania University. To the Academy and the College of Arts, which had existed at Harrodsburg, were now added the College of the Bible and the College of Law.

By an act of the Legislature, approved February 22, 1865, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky was made one of the colleges of Kentucky University. Its first session began October 1, 1866 This College ceased to be one of the colleges of Kentucky University by virtue of an act of the Legislature, approved March 13, 1878.

The Commercial College was organized in the summer of 1867, and was opened to students October 7, 1867.

In the summer of 1878 the last session of the College of the Bible under the charter of Kentucky University closed, and the new College of the Bible, which had been established in 1877, took its place. This College, organized under its own charter and in administration and control entirely independent of the University, is yet conducted in connection with it.

Transylvania Seminary was chartered by the Legislature of Virginia May, 1783. The first meeting of its trustees was held November 10, 1783, near Danville, Ky. Its first session began February 1, 1785. After a few years the Seminary was removed to Lexington, Ky. Its first session in this place began June 1, 1789.

By an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved December 22, 1798, Transylvania Seminary and Kentucky Academy were united January 1, 1799, under the name of TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY.

After an existence of sixty-six years, Transylvania University was consolidated with Kentucky University by an act of the Legislature, approved February 28, 1865, and accepted by the Curators of Kentucky University June 20, 1865.

Second Term—Grammar; Brandt's German Reader.

Senior Class.

First Term—Grammar (Joynes-Meissner); Undine (Fouque); Wilhelm Tell.

Second Term—Grammar; Wilhelm Tell; Jungfrau von Orleans (Schiller).

IX. School of Civil Engineering.

PROFESSOR KEMPER.

The full course will embrace the following subjects:

Mathematics—The entire course.

Natural Science—Natural Philosophy; Chemistry; Geology; Mineralogy.

In addition to the above, as belonging to the department proper, the following scheme of studies, in two divisions:

FIRST DIVISION.

Free and Mechanical Drawing; Map Drawing; Gillespie's Roads and Railroads; Henck's Field Book.

SECOND DIVISION.

Church's Descriptive Geometry; Shades, Shadows, and Perspective; Merriman's Mechanics of Materials; Wheeler's Civil Engineering.

To study successfully the subjects embraced in the first division, requires that the student shall have passed through the Freshman Class and the First Term of the Sophomore Class in the School of Mathematics, and for the second division some skill in applying the Differential and Integral Calculus.

THE CLASSICAL COURSE.

The Classical Course, which leads to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, comprises all the studies of the first seven of the schools indicated above (pages 28-32), except those of the Senior classes in Greek, Latin, Mathematics, and English, and of one term of the Senior Class in Natural Science. Studies that may be taken as substitutes are named on page 42.

The subjoined scheme shows how the Classical Course can be completed in four years:

SPECIAL COURSES.

Students that do not intend to take a degree may, with the consent of the Faculty, select their own course of study.

SELECTION OF CLASSES.

Students are not required to take all their classes in the same year of the courses, but are permitted to enter that class of any school for which their attainments qualify them.

RECITATIONS.

Each recitation of every class occupies an hour.

The number of recitations of each student must be at least twelve a week. More can, in most cases, be profitably attended: only in exceptional cases is a smaller number permitted.

ACADEMY.

R. H. ELLETT, Principal.

W. G. CONLEY, Assistant.

H. L. CALHOUN, Second Assistant.

The Academic or Preparatory Course of instruction is designed to fit students for the Freshman Class in the College of Arts.

For entrance into the Academy, applicants must not be less than thirteen years of age; must know the rudiments of Geography, Grammar, and Arithmetic; and must consent to be governed by the University code of discipline. Pupils, unless excused, must spend daily in the room of the Principal a required number of hours in study.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

English—Welsh's Lessons in English; Study of Words.

Mathematics—Peck's Arithmetic; Peck's Algebra begun.

Latin—Harkness's Grammar; Exercises at the blackboard in writing Latin, with quantities marked; Cæsar begun.

Greek—Goodwin's Grammar; White's First Lessons; Goodwin's Selections from Xenophon and Herodotus.

History—Myer's Eastern Nations; Scudder's United States.

Geography—Harper's Modern.

Natural Science—Houston's Physical Geography.

ELOCUTION AND ORATORY.

This department is in charge of Professor P. K. Dillenbeck, who has for several years been conducting classes in the University very successfully in this important branch of study.

The course, extending over two years, is thorough and complete. For instruction in it a special fee is charged.

COLLEGE OF THE BIBLE.

The College of the Bible under the charter of Kentucky University is no longer in operation. Its place, as has been stated above in the history of the University, is supplied by the new College of the Bible, which is conducted in the buildings of the University. Students of the College of Arts have access, without charge, to the classes of the College of the Bible, and, on the other hand, matriculates in the latter receive, free of cost, instruction in the classes of the former, or in those of the Academy. Experience has clearly shown that both institutions can thus be conducted in perfect harmony, and with decided advantage to the students of each.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In this College there are two courses, the Merchant's Scientific Course and the Full Diploma Course. The former requires from five to seven weeks to complete it, the latter from eight to twelve weeks. A separate charge is made for instruction in Phonography, Type-writing, and Telegraphy.

The session continues throughout the year. Students can enter at any time. There is no class system, but individual instruction, each pupil advancing as rapidly as he may be able.

The hours of work are from 9 A. M. to 12 M., 1½ to 4 P. M., and 7 to 8½ P. M.

Students of this college, after the completion of their course, can attend, for the remainder of the session, without charge, the classes of the College of Arts and of the Academy.

RULES OF CONDUCT

FOR STUDENTS IN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY.

It is presumed that every one qualified to enter the University as a student knows the first principles of morality, propriety, and decorum, and that it is, therefore, unnecessary to prescribe a complete code of regulations. But it is required of a student—

1. That he shall study diligently; punctually attend worship, recitations, examinations, and all other University exercises; and that he shall promptly render a reason to the proper officers for delinquency on his part.

2. That he shall neither enter nor leave a class without permission from the Faculty.

3. That he shall treat all persons, and especially the officers of the University, with becoming respect.

4. That he shall not trespass on the premises of any one, and that he shall in no way injure the property of the University.

5. That he shall attend no exhibition of immoral tendency; no racefield, theatre, circus, billiard saloon, bar-room, or tippling-house.

6. That he shall neither introduce upon the premises of the University, nor use there or elsewhere, intoxicating drink; and that he shall not use tobacco in the buildings of the University.

7. That he shall neither keep nor use fire-arms, a dirk, a bowie-knife, or any other deadly weapon.

8. That he shall abstain from profanity, from the desecration of the Lord's day, from gaming for reward or prize of any kind, and from card playing even for amusement; also from whatever else is inconsistent with good order, good taste, and good morals.

9. That he shall attend public service at some church every Lord's day, and worship in the Chapel every school day.

10. That he shall not go beyond the immediate precincts of Lexington during the session without permission of the Faculty, or, where this cannot be obtained, without the consent of the President.

11. That he shall not leave the University without the special permission of the Faculty, until he is regularly dismissed at the close of the session.

12. That he shall belong to no secret College Society or association, unless approved by the Faculty.

13. That he shall not change his place of lodging or boarding without permission of the Faculty,

14. That he shall faithfully observe the by-laws adopted by the Faculty for the discipline and government of students.

15. That he shall shun and discountenance disorderly combinations of students or citizens; and that he shall co-operate with the Faculty in every way to promote the interests of the University.

16. That he shall not be noisy in or about the University buildings; and that he shall not play on the grounds except during the hours appointed by the Faculty for recreation, or near the college buildings AT ANY TIME.

17. That he shall sign no petition or other paper to the Board or the Executive Committee in regard to the government of the University, or to the appointment or dismissal of professors or officers; and that he shall not attend or give countenance to any meeting to criticise the government of the University.

MISCELLANY.

SESSION, TERMS, COMMENCEMENT.

In the College of Arts and in the Academy the session, which begins on the second Monday in September and ends on the second Thursday in June, is divided into two equal terms; in the Commercial College the session continues throughout the year.

ADMISSION.

Every applicant for admission must present satisfactory evidence of good moral character; and if previously connected with any other college or academy, a certificate of honorable dismission therefrom.

For admission into the College of Arts, the student must be at least fourteen years of age, and must be qualified for admission to at least one Freshman Class. Applicants not thus prepared will be enrolled as students in the Academy.

To enter the Freshman Class in any school, the candidate should give evidence of a fair acquaintance with the preparatory course (or its equivalent) of that school, as laid down in the Academic Course of Instruction.

WOMEN.

The College of Arts is now open to students of both sexes. It is the policy of the University to receive only such young women as students as are ready for the Freshman Class in the School of Mathematics or in the School of English, and are of suitable age; this will not preclude them from attending some classes in the Academy also. The conditions of entering the Freshman year are stated in the previous paragraph.

As the University is not yet provided with a boarding-house for young women, only those will be received as students who have or can find a home in the city or vicinity where they can be under a protecting and controlling family care, and such also as are of sufficient age and experience to be safely committed to themselves. Parents and others who desire to send young women to the University are requested to communicate with the President, who will give all desired information.

MATRICULATION.

A student, upon his arrival, should report promptly to the President, with his testimonials of character and standing. He should, as early as practicable, secure suitable board and lodging. Failure to observe these regulations may bar his admission.

After successful examination and payment of fees he will, upon reading the rules of conduct, be entitled to matriculate by signing the following declaration: "I enter the University with a sincere desire to enjoy the benefits of its instruction, and with a determined resolution to conform to its laws."

FEES.

MATRICULATION—College of Arts, $10.00; Academy, $10.00; Commercial College, free.

TUITION—College of Arts, tuition coupon or $2.00; Commercial College, Merchant's Course, $35.00; Full Diploma Course, $55.00; Academy, tuition coupon or $2.00.

LABORATORY—Junior Class, $5.00; Senior Class, $10.00, for the use of chemicals. In the former class a deposit of $3.00, in the latter of $5.00, will be required, to cover any damage to apparatus.

GRADUATION—Bachelor's degree, $10.00; Master's degree, $10.00; certificate from any one school, $3.00.

All fees are required in advance.

No tuition fee is required in the College of Arts of any student in indigent circumstances that has had one year's expericnce in teaching, and that intends to make it his profession.

EXAMINATIONS AND REPORTS.

There are two kinds of examinations; the first in connection with the daily lecture or recitation, the second at the close of each term.

After examination, a number is placed opposite to the name of the student, designating the estimated value of his exercise. From these numbers the scholarship of each student is estimated at the end of each term, and a report thereof sent to his parent or guardian.

In this report, which contains an estimate of the student's conduct also and a record of his absences, one hundred denotes perfect merit, and seventy-five the lowest that entitles the student to regular standing in a class.

GRADUATION AND DEGREES.

A student may graduate in any school of the College of Arts on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have been a member of that school at least one year, and shall have completed in a satisfactory manner all the studies thereof, or a fair equivalent.

2. That he shall have habitually observed the rules of the University.

For the degree of BACHELOR OF ARTS, the studies of the Classical Course (page 33) are required; except, however, that instead of the Junior Greek, Latin, Mathematics, or English, or one term of the Senior Natural Science, any or all of them, a candidate for this degree may elect as a substitute the Senior Greek, Latin, Mathematics, or English, or any class of the School of Modern Languages. He may also use as a substitute the Freshman, Junior, or Senior class in the School of Sacred Literature, and the Junior or Senior Class in the School of Sacred History, in the College of the Bible.

For the degree of BACHELOR OF SCIENCE, the studies of the Scientific Course (page 34) are required; except, however, that instead of the course in French or German, a candidate for this degree may substitute two years of either Greek or Latin, or one year of each.

A candidate may be admitted to the degree of MASTER OF ARTS, on the following conditions:

1. That, having received at least one year before, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he shall have since maintained a good moral character.

2. That he shall, as a resident graduate or otherwise, have completed to the satisfaction of the Faculty an additional year in any three of the first five schools (pages 28-30); a prescribed course in Civil History, English Literature, or Philosophy; and and any one of the languages of the following list, not already taken for the degree of Bachelor of Arts: Hebrew, French, German, Italian, Spanish.

A candidate may be admitted to the degree of MASTER OF SCIENCE, on the following conditions:

1. That having received, at least one year before, in the College of Arts, the degree of Bachelor of Science, he shall have since maintained a good moral character.

2. That he shall have presented to the Faculty satisfactory evidence of such additional attainments in the Schools of Mathematics, Philosophy, and Natural Science, as shall fully correspond to a year's study in each of these schools.

The fees for the several degrees are indicated on page 41.

GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE.

The government of the University, administered by the President and Faculty, aims to maintain such a discipline among the students as will conduce to the good order and prosperity of the institution. The rule of discipline is parental, conducted not with severity, but with strictness. There is no forbearance with evil; every element of disorder, as soon as discovered, is at once removed. The President and Professors bear themselves toward the students as friends.

This kind of government has borne its good fruits. The University enjoys an enviable reputation for the excellent character of its students and for the general good order pervading it.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL CULTURE.

Every recitation day is opened with religious worship in the Chapel, consisting of reading the Scriptures, singing, and prayer. The professors are present, and attendance on the part of the students is obligatory.

The Bible in English and in the original tongues is a textbook in the University.

Students are expected to attend religious services in the churches of the city on Sunday. A large number of them are regularly present at prayer-meeting during the week, and many are members of Bible Classes that look especially to their religious and spiritual instruction and training.

A College Young Men's Christian Association and a Students' Missionary Society contribute also to awaken and cultivate a religious interest among the students.

A large majority of the students are professing Christians.

PUBLIC LECTURES.

The Kentucky University Lecture Association, which has been in successful operation for several years, contributes much to the intellectual culture and enjoyment of the students. A course of lectures is arranged every session, which brings to the University some of the best lecturing talent of the land. Only such teachers of the platform are invited by the Association as honor and advocate the Christian religion. These lectures have thus far met with remarkable success, and now constitute one of the permanent attractions of the University.

LOCATION.

The College of Arts, the College of the Bible, and the Academy occupy the Transylvania grounds and buildings in the city of Lexington.

This city is situated in the midst of the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, and is noted for its healthfulness and its superior social and religious influences. It affords to students boarding in good private families, with excellent opportunities for culture and refinement.

LIBRARIES.

The law, the medical, and the miscellaneous libraries of the University, comprising about twelve thousand volumes, are open to all its students. The large and valuable Library of the city of Lexington is accessible upon the payment of a small fee; its reading-room is free.

APPARATUS AND MUSEUM.

The University has a large and valuable collection of chemical, philosophical, and astronomical apparatus, and a museum containing an extensive collection of anatomical, geological, and mineral specimens and objects of Natural History, all well adapted to the purpose of illustration and instruction in its schools of science.

SOCIETIES.

In the College of Arts are three literary societies, the Cecropian, the Periclean, and the Ossolian. They have their halls and libraries, and their weekly exercises add to the facilities afforded for practice in composition, elocution, and discussion.

GYMNASIUM.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of Alumni of the University, held on the evening of last Commencement Day, it was resolved to raise means for the erection of a gymnasium. Several thousand dollars were secured on the spot, to which additions are being daily made by the efforts of active canvassers. It may, therefore, be confidently expected that that means of promoting the physical health and development of our students will soon be added to the facilities already afforded by the ample grounds of the University.

BOARDING.

A student can select his house for boarding and lodging, subject in all cases to the approval of the Faculty. He can not, however, board or lodge in any house in which intoxicating liquors are sold, in which card playing or billiard playing is practiced, or in which the rules of good order and decorum are, in any respect, disregarded. In private families, the weekly cost of boarding, fuel, light, and the use of furnished rooms, varies from $3.00 to $5.00.

BEQUESTS.

Institutions of learning have very often received large donations from bequests. There are, therefore, subjoined here general and special forms of bequests, both as incentives and directions to such friends of the University as may desire to remember it liberally in their wills.

FORMS OF BEQUEST.

GENERAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of .....dollars, to be applied at the discretion of the Curators for the general purposes of the University.

SPECIAL.

"I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of .....dollars, to be invested by the Curators as an endowment for the support of (a professorship or some other object designated in the bequest)."

GENERAL DESIGN OF THE COLLEGE.

The design of this Institution is to prepare young men for usefulness in the Church by furnishing them with systematic instruction in the Word of God in both the English version and the original tongues, and with an accurate knowledge of the higher branches of English Literature and Philosophy. While its course of study is especially adapted to those who intend to become preachers of the gospel, it is not a professional school, its classes being open to all religious young men who wish to extend their knowledge of the Scriptures.

———o———

SPECIAL DESIGN OF EACH DEPARTMENT.

I. The English.—There are many pious young men who have neither the time nor the means to obtain a classical education, but yet have a desire and the ability to be very useful in the ministry, and it is the special design of this department to afford to such an opportunity to become well acquainted with the English Language and its literature. They are also taught the history of England, with special reference to the development of the mind and the language of the nation.

A student who reads, writes and spells well, and who has a good knowledge of Arithmetic, Geography, History and English Grammar, can enter the Freshman class, in which for one year he is drilled in the structure of his mother tongue.

In the Junior class the student spends one year in Rhetoric and Composition, special attention being paid to the latter. As fast as principles are learned they are practically applied in oral and written exercises, and this is kept up through the whole session. Particular attention is given to the History of England.

The Senior Year completes the course in English, and is devoted to Literature proper and Criticism. It is the aim to make the student familiar with the intellectual achievements of English and American authors from Chaucer to the present time, and to show him how to apply critically what he has already learned. Instruction in reading and elocution, with practical exercises, is given during the session.

II. Sacred History.—The design of this department is twofold; first, to lay a solid foundation in the knowledge of the historical facts of the Bible for all subsequent advances in Biblical study; and second, to make the student familiar with a large amount of material suitable for discourses and illustrations. Incidentally, the faith of the student is strengthened by making him acquainted with the actual contents of the Bible.

To attain the ends just stated, the course of study in Sacred History is more extended than in other colleges of like character. It includes all the historical books of both the Old Testament and the New, together with all the historical information to be gleaned from the other sacred books, and much subsidiary information found in secular history.

The method of instruction is by lectures, and these are followed by recitations in which the matter of the lectures and of the text is reproduced by the student. Every book is distributed into its natural divisions of Parts, Sections and Paragraphs, all of which are studied both separately and connectedly, so that when a book is completed its whole structure and design are understood. As far as may be, all obscure passages are made clear, and apparent discrepancies are reconciled. Special attention is given to Geography and Topography, and for the purpose of illustrating these topics, the department is furnished with a first-class Stereopticon, and a set of slides representing in large and brilliant pictures the localities in which the events of the sacred narrative transpired. The course in Evidences, is in part coincident with that in Sacred History; for the internal proofs of authenticity and those found in contemporary history are constantly pointed out, but the entire course of Sacred History is followed by a special course in Evidences, occupying one whole term.

The Freshman Year is devoted to the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges and Ruth. The Law of Moses is studied systematically. This is both important in itself, and indispensible to the proper understanding of many passages in the later books of the Bible

The statutes of the Law, both civil and religious, are properly classified according to the distinctions employed in modern statute books.

The studies of the Sophomore Year cover a much neglected, but exceedingly important portion of Sacred History. No part of the Bible furnishes so many illustrations of the divine government and of the practical working of sin and redemtion among men. The preacher familiar with it has an inexhaustible fund from which to draw while enforcing the claims of religion on mankind.

The members of the Junior class are required to memorize the text carefully, except in a few passages, so that they may always have it at command. They study the matter and structure of each book separately, so as to appreciate its destinctive peculiarities, and then combine the information contained in all by means of a review, in which the events are considered in their chronological order, so far as this can be ascertained. The character and claims of Jesus are kept constantly in view.

The first term of the Senior Year is employed in studying the development and spread of the Church as given in Acts of Apostles, the controversial questions which have arisen in connection with its teaching, the chronology of the book, and the historical matter found in the Epistles. The second term is spent in discussing the Evidences, including an inquiry into the Preservation of the Text of the Scriptures, the History of the Canonical books, and the Proofs of their Credibility and Inspiration. The Text book throughout the course is the Revised English Bible; and the student is required to have in hand for frequent reference, the Works of Josephus, a Biblical Atlas, and McGarvey's Lands of the Bible.

III. Sacred Literature.—In this department the student of the English Scriptures obtains a knowledge of Christian doctrine and the principles of Biblical interpretation. In its Classical Course he receives instruction in the Hebrew language and in Greek Exegesis.

In the Sophomore Year thorough instruction is given in the whole scheme of Redemption as taught in the Holy Scriptures, followed by lectures on Ecclesiastical History, including that of doctrines, schisms and sects, from the death of Christ till the present time.

The Junior Year is devoted to Hermeneutics. In the application of the principles of interpretation there are two distinct features; first the exegetical analysis of the Scriptures into sections, paragraphs, elements of thought, sub-elements, etc.; and second, exegetical discussion at the end of paragraphs containing words or expressions which demand additional explanation. In these processes free use is made of the assistance afforded by the labors of such exegetes as Meyer, Tholuck, Alford, Lange, Bengel and others, at the same time the student is carefully guarded against all deference to authorities that would preclude an independent examination of the text itself, and an unbiased application of the principles of Hermeneutics, by which all alike must be governed.

The Senior Year is spent in fitting the preacher for his life work. This includes the preparation and delivery of sermons, discussions of topics, pastoral work, choice of books, etc.; in a word, the whole subject of Homiletics.

IV. Philosophy.—The purpose of this department is to make the preacher thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the human intellect; to furnish him with the weapons to be used in defending the faith and assailing the strongholds of error; and to show him how to lay open the secret springs of the Heart and Will so as to lead both to the obedience of the gospel. There is a philosophy, falsely so called, that in many places is sapping the foundations of religion, and the preacher of to-day must be able to meet the assailants in their own way as they secretly as well as openly work their approaches to the citadel of divine truth. He can do this only by understanding his Bible on the one hand and the human mind on the other. The information and mental discipline acquired in this department are in utility to the preacher second only to his knowledge of the Word of God.

VOCAL MUSIC.

It has been the purpose of the College from the beginning to furnish instruction in vocal music to all of its students, and something has been accomplished in this way, but for want of funds no regular music teacher has been appointed. This department is placed annually under the charge of a competent teacher: the class is at present voluntary, and a small fee is charged for the instruction given.

—o—

ACCOMMODATIONS AND EXPENSES.

Boarding can be obtained in private families at from $3.00 to $4.00 per week, including all expenses except washing. But arrangements have been made by which students can board in clubs at from $1.50 to 2.00 per week, exclusive of washing, fuel and lights. For the accomodation of students in this respect, we have the exclusive use of three College Halls on the campus. The rooms, forty in number, have been comfortably fitted up for occupation by students.

Each occupant of a room is required to share with his roommates the expense of furnishing it. But this is made light by the fact that it is incurred but once, and the furniture can always be sold when no longer needed. No rooms are engaged to new students before their matriculation.

The entire expense per annum of students who occupy rooms in the Halls, may be set down as follows:

Janitor's Fee	$10.00
Room Rent	10.00
Club Fees (payable weekly)	70.00
Washing, Fuel, Lights	20.00
Books, Stationery, etc	20.00
Total	$130.00.

The Classes of the College of the Bible are taught in the same building with those of the College of Science, Literature and Arts. Our students are admitted without charge to any of the classes in that College, and thus an opportunity is afforded them of prosecuting literary and scientific studies simultaneously with the study of the word of God; and in addition to their own, they have free access to the large library of the University. Their own literary societies (The Philothean and Phileusebian) afford ample opportunity for self-improvement to all who become members of them.

It is earnestly desired that all who intend to enter the College be present at the opening of the session.

Kentucky University.

Organization.

The University comprises four colleges, each under the government of its own Faculty, and a preparatory department in charge of a principal and assistants. These departments are severally styled—

1. The College of Liberal Arts.
2. The College of the Bible.
3. The College of Law.
4. The Commercial College.
5. The Academy.

The College of Liberal Arts, the College of Law and the Commercial College are open to both sexes.

Matriculates of the College of Liberal Arts have the privilege of attending, without additional charge, classes of the College of the Bible and the Academy. Matriculates of the College of the Bible and of the College of Law, as also matriculates of the Commercial College after the completion of their business course, have a like privilege of attending classes of the College of Liberal Arts and the Academy.

The colleges are divided into schools, or departments of instruction, each of which is under the immediate direction of a professor, who is assisted, when necessary, by a competent instructor.

Detailed information is given below concerning the departments of the University in their order and under the head of General Miscellanea. Further inquiry should be addressed to the President of the University or to the presiding officer of the college concerning which information is desired.

Historical Sketch.

Bacon College, the earliest literary institution of its grade established by the Disciples of Christ, began its first session in Georgetown, Ky., November 7, 1836. Its charter, granted at the next session of the Legislature, was approved February 23, 1837.

In the summer of 1839, the institution was removed to Har-rodsburg, Ky. Beginning its first session in that place September 2, 1839, it was conducted there until insufficient means led to its suspension in the summer of 1850.

In the winter of 1856, John B. Bowman, of Mercer county, entered on the work of founding a university on the ruins of Bacon College. His appeals for financial aid were successful beyond expectation, and the preparatory department was opened September 21, 1857.

An amended charter, approved January 15, 1858, in which the provisions of the first charter were greatly extended, and the name of the institution was changed to KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY, was accepted by the trustees of Bacon College February 2, 1858.

The collegiate department was opened, under the presidency of Robert Milligan, September 19, 1859, and was conducted in Harrodsburg until the summer of 1865, when, after the destruction of the college building by fire, the University was removed to Lexington, Ky., where it succeeded to the property of Transylvania University.

Transylvania Seminary was chartered by the Legislature of Virginia in May, 1783. The first meeting of its trustees was held November 10, 1783, near Danville, Ky. Its first session began February 1, 1785. After a few years the Seminary was removed to Lexington, Ky. Its first session in this place began June 1, 1789.

By an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved December 22, 1798, Transylvania Seminary and Kentucky Academy were united January 1, 1799, under the name of TRANSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY.

After an existence of sixty-six years, Transylvania University was consolidated with Kentucky University by an act of the Legislature, approved February 28, 1865, and accepted by the Curators of Kentucky University, June 20, 1865.

The first session of Kentucky University in Lexington began October 2, 1865. To the College of Liberal Arts and the Academy, which had been conducted at Harrodsburg, the College of the Bible and the College of Law were now added.

The office of Regent of the University was created July 17, 1865. John B. Bowman, the founder of the University, was elected Regent, which office he held until June of 1878.

By an act of the Legislature, approved February 22, 1865, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky was made one of the colleges of Kentucky University. Its first session began October 1, 1866. This college ceased to be one of the colleges of Kentucky University by virtue of an act of the Legislature, approved March 13, 1878.

The Commercial College was organized in the summer of 1867, and was opened to students October 7, 1867.

In the summer of 1878 the last session of the College of the Bible under the charter of Kentucky University closed, and the new College of the Bible, which had been established in 1877, took its place. This college, organized under its own charter and in administration and control entirely independent of the University, is yet conducted in connection with it.

The office of Regent was discontinued June 12, 1878, at which time Henry H. White was elected President of the University. He filled this office until, on his voluntary resignation of the presidency in June of 1880, Charles Louis Loos was elected to the place he still fills.

Every student should have Harper's Latin Dictionary, Anthon's or Smith's Classical Dictionary, and Kiepert's Atlas Antiquus.

III. School of Mathematics.

PROFESSOR WHITE.

Freshman Class.

FIRST TERM—Peck's Algebra to Chapter XI.
SECOND TERM—Algebra completed; Peck's Geometry to Book VI.

Sophomore Class.

FIRST TERM—Peck's Geometry completed; Peck's Trigonometry, Plane and Analytical; Peck's Mensuration; Loomis's Surveying.
SECOND TERM—Peck's Analytical Geometry, Part I.

Junior Class.

FIRST TERM—Peck's Mechanics; Peck's Spherical Trigonometry.
SECOND TERM—Snell's Olmsted's Astronomy.

Senior Class.

FIRST TERM—Peck's Analytical Geometry, Part II.; Peck's Differential Calculus.
SECOND TERM—Peck's Integral Calculus; Applications of the Calculus to Mechanics and Astronomy.

IV. School of the English Language and Literature.

PROFESSOR FREEMAN,

ADJUNCT PROFESSOR CONLEY.

Freshman Class.

FIRST TERM—Montgomery's History of England; Whitney's Essentials of English Grammar begun, with Exercises in Composition.

SECOND TERM—Whitney's Essentials completed, with Exercises in Composition.

Sophomore Class.

FIRST TERM—Clark's Rhetoric begun, with Exercises in Composition.

SECOND TERM—Clark's Rhetoric completed, with Exercises in Composition; Shaw's History of English Literature.

Junior Class.

FIRST TERM—Critical Reading of English Prose; Minto's Manual of English Prose Literature for reference.

SECOND TERM—Lounsbury's History of the English Language; Chaucer, Prologue and Knightes Tale (Skeat-Morris); Spenser, Faery Queen, Book I. (Kitchin).

V. School of Natural Science.

PROFESSOR FAIRHURST.

Freshman Class.

FIRST TERM—Anatomy and Physiology.

SECOND TERM—Natural Philosophy, with Experimental Illustrations.

Junior Class.

FIRST TERM—Chemistry, with Laboratory Work.

SECOND TERM—Zoology and Botany.

Senior Class.

FIRST TERM—Mineralogy and Geology.

SECOND TERM—Analytical Chemistry, with two hours' work daily in the Laboratory.

TEXT-BOOKS—Martin's Human Body; Gage's Elements of Physics; Shepard's Elements of Chemistry; Gray's School and Field Book of Botany; Orton's Zoology; Elderhorst's Blowpipe Analysis; Dana's New Text-book of Geology; Prescott and Johnson's Qualitative Chemical Analysis.

VI. School of Sacred History and Evidences of Christianity.

PROFESSOR ELLETT.

FIRST TERM—Selections from the Pentateuch and the Later Historical Books of the Old Testament.

SECOND TERM—Gospels and Acts of Apostles: Evidences of Christianity.

TEXT-BOOKS—The Revised Version of the Old and New Testament; Fisher's Manual of Christian Evidences.

VII. School of Mental, Moral and Political Philosophy.

PROFESSOR GRAHAM.

Junior Class.

SECOND TERM—Haven's Mental Philosophy completed.

Senior Class.

FIRST TERM—Wayland's Moral Science; Wayland's Political Economy begun.

SECOND TERM—Wayland's Political Economy completed; Alden's Civil Government.

Every student should have Bowen's Hamilton's Metaphysics; Bowen's Logic; Story on the Constitution; Fleming and Krauth's Vocabulary of the Philosophical Sciences.

VIII. School of Modern Languages.

PROFESSOR KEMPER.

French.

Junior Class.

FIRST TERM—Chardenal's Complete Course begun; Super's French Reader.

SECOND TERM—Chardenal's Complete Course completed: Whitney's French Reader; Hugo's Bug Jargal.

Senior Class.

FIRST TERM—Whitney's French Grammar; Lamartine's Jeanne d'Arc; Racine.

SECOND TERM—Corneille; Moliere; Voltaire; Hudson's French Literature.

German.

Junior Class.

FIRST TERM—Joynes-Otto's German Lessons begun; Joyne's German Reader.

SECOND TERM—Joynes-Otto's German Lessons completed; Brandt's German Reader.

Senior Class.

FIRST TERM—Joynes-Meissner's German Grammar; Fouque's Undine; Schiller's Wilhelm Tell.

SECOND TERM—Joynes-Meissner's German Grammar completed; Schiller's Wilhelm Tell and Jungfrau von Orleans; Lessing's Minna von Barnhelm; History of German Literature.

IX. School of Civil Engineering.

PROFESSOR KEMPER.

The full course embraces the following subjects:

Mathematics—The entire course.

Natural Science—Natural Philosophy; Chemistry; Geology; Mineralogy.

In addition to the above, as belonging to the department proper, the following scheme of studies, in two divisions:

FIRST DIVISION.

Free and Mechanical Drawing; Map Drawing; Gillespie's Roads and Railroads; Henck's Field Book.

SECOND DIVISION.

Church's Descriptive Geometry; Shades, Shadows and Perspective; Merriman's Mechanics of Materials; Wheeler's Civil Engineering.

To study successfully the subjects embraced in the first division, requires that the student shall have passed through the Freshman course and the first term of the Sophomore course in the School of Mathematics, and for the second division some skill in applying the Differential and Integral Calculus.

Special Courses.

Students that do not intend to take a degree may, with the consent of the Faculty, select their own course of study.

Selection of Classes.

Students are not required to take all their classes in the same year of the course, but are permitted to enter that class of any school for which their attainments qualify them.

Recitations.

Each recitation of every class occupies an hour.

The number of recitations of each student must be at least twelve a week. More can, in most cases, be profitably attended: only in exceptional cases is a smaller number permitted.

Rules of Conduct.

It is presumed that every one qualified to enter the University as a student knows the first principles of morality, propriety and decorum, and that it is, therefore, unnecessary to prescribe a complete code of regulations. But it is required of a student—

1. That he shall study diligently; that he shall attend worship, recitations, examinations and all other University exercises punctually, and that, for any delinquency on his part, he shall render a reason to the proper officers promptly.

2. That he shall neither enter nor leave a class without permission from the Faculty.

3. That he shall treat all persons, and especially the officers of the University, with becoming respect.

4. That he shall not trespass on the premises of any one, and that he shall in no way injure the property of the University.

5. That he shall not attend any exhibition of immoral tendency, nor any racefield, theatre, circus, billiard saloon, bar-room or tippling-house.

6. That he shall neither introduce upon the premises of the University nor use, there or elsewhere, intoxicating drink; and that he shall not use tobacco in the buildings of the University.

7. That he shall neither keep nor use fire-arms, a dirk, a bowie-knife or any other deadly weapon.

8. That he shall abstain from profanity, from the desecration of the Lord's day, from gaming for reward or prize of any kind, and from card playing even for amusement; also from whatever else is inconsistent with good order, good taste and good morals.

9. That he shall attend public service at some church every Lord's day, and worship in the Chapel every school day.

10. That he shall not go beyond the immediate precincts of Lexington during the session without permission of the Faculty, or, when this cannot be obtained, without the consent of the President.

11. That he shall not leave the University without the special permission of the Faculty until he is regularly dismissed at the close of the session.

12. That he shall not belong to any secret college society or association that has not been approved by the Faculty.

13. That he shall not change his place of lodging or boarding without permission of the Faculty.

14. That he shall faithfully observe the by-laws adopted by the Faculty for the discipline and government of students.

15. That he shall shun and discountenance disorderly combinations of students and citizens, and that he shall co-operate with the Faculty in every way to promote the interests of the University.

16. That he shall not be noisy in or about the University buildings; and that he shall not play on the grounds except during the hours appointed by the Faculty for recreation, or near the College buildings at any time.

17. That he shall not sign any petition or other paper to the Board or the Executive Committee in regard to the government of the University, or to the appointment or dismissal of professors or officers; and that he shall not attend or give countenance to any meeting to criticise the government of the University.

Miscellanea.

Admission.

Every applicant for admission into the College of Liberal Arts must present satisfactory evidence of good moral character; and if previously connected with any college or academy, a certificate of honorable dismission therefrom.

For admission into this college, the student must be at least fourteen years of age, and must be qualified for admission to at least one Freshman Class. Applicants not thus prepared will be enrolled as students in the Academy.

To enter the Freshman Class in any school, the candidate should give evidence of a fair acquaintance with the preparatory course, or its equivalent, of that school, as laid down in the Academic Course of Instruction.

Examinations and Reports.

There are two kinds of examinations—the first in connection with the daily lecture or recitation, the second at the close of each term.

After examination a number is placed opposite to the name of the student, designating the estimated value of his exercise. From these numbers the scholarship of each student is estimated at the end of each term, and a report thereof sent to his parent or guardian.

In this report, which contains an estimate of the student's conduct also and a record of his absences, one hundred denotes perfect merit, and seventy-five the lowest that entitles the student to regular standing in a class.

Any student, the average of whose daily recitations in any study is not less than ninety, may be excused from the term examination and from any other general examination in that study.

Graduation and Degrees.

A student may graduate in any school of the College of Liberal Arts on the following conditions:

1. That he shall have been a member of that school at least one year, and shall have completed in a satisfactory manner all the studies thereof or a fair equivalent.

2. That he shall have habitually observed the rules of the University.

For the degree of BACHELOR OF ARTS the studies of the Classical Course (page 22) are required; except, however, that instead of the Junior Greek, Latin, Mathematics or English, or one term of the Senior Natural Science, any or all of them, a candidate for this degree may elect as a substitute the Senior Greek, Latin, Mathematics or English, or any one class of the School of Modern Languages. He may also elect two substitutes from courses of the College of the Bible, viz., the Freshman, Junior or Senior course in the School of Sacred Literature, and the Junior or Senior Course in the School of Sacred History.

For the degree of BACHELOR OF LITERATURE the studies of the Literary Course (page 23) are required; except, however, that instead of the course in Latin a candidate for this degree may substitute an equivalent course in Greek. He may also substitute for one term of Junior Latin or Senior Natural Science, or for both terms of Senior English, any or all of them, what will, in the judgment of the Faculty, be an equivalent amount of study selected from the courses of the first eight schools. In the latter substitution he may use the course in Hebrew also in the College of the Bible.

For the degree of BACHELOR OF SCIENCE the studies of the Scientific Course (page 24) are required; except, however, that instead of the course in French or German a candidate for this degree may substitute two years of either Greek or Latin, or one year of each.

A candidate may be admitted to the degree of MASTER OF ARTS on the following conditions:

1. That having received at least one year before in the College of Liberal Arts the degree of Bachelor of Arts, he shall have since maintained a good moral character.

2. That he shall, as a resident graduate or otherwise, have completed to the satisfaction of the Faculty an additional year in any three of the first five schools (pages 16–18); a prescribed course in Civil History, English Literature or Philosophy; and any one of the languages of the following list not already taken for the degree of Bachelor of Arts: Hebrew, French, German, Italian and Spanish.

A candidate may be admitted to the degree of MASTER OF LITERATURE on the following conditions:

1. That having received at least one year before in the College of Liberal Arts the degree of Bachelor of Literature, he shall have since maintained a good moral character.

2. That he shall, as a resident graduate or otherwise, have completed to the satisfaction of the Faculty the studies of the School of Latin or Greek not already taken for the degree of Bachelor of Literature; the Freshman and Sophomore courses of the other of those schools; a prescribed course in Civil History, English Literature or Philosophy; and any one of the languages of the following list not already taken for the degree of Bachelor of Literature: Hebrew, Italian and Spanish.

A candidate may be admitted to the degree of MASTER OF SCIENCE on the following conditions:

1. That having received at least one year before in the College of Liberal Arts the degree of Bachelor of Science, he shall have since maintained a good moral character.

2. That he shall have presented to the Faculty satisfactory evidence of such additional attainments in the Schools of Mathematics, Philosophy and Natural Science, as shall fully correspond to a year's study in each of these schools.

Honors.

All candidates for graduation that complete the Classical, Literary or Scientific Course, with an average scholarship in the College of Liberal Arts of not less than ninety, are designated honor students.

The valedictory is awarded to that candidate for graduation in any of these courses whose average standing is highest; and the salutatory to that candidate whose average standing is next to the highest. But neither the valedictory nor the salutatory can be delivered by one who is not completing his second full session as a matriculate of the College of Liberal Arts.

General Design of the College.

The design of this institution is to prepare young men for usefulness in the Church by furnishing them with systematic instruction in the Word of God in both the English version and the original tongues, and with an accurate knowledge of the higher branches of English Literature and Philosophy. While its course of study is especially adapted to those who intend to become preachers of the Gospel, it is not a professional school, its classes being open to all religious young men who wish to extend their knowledge of the Scriptures. Two classes of students are provided for:

I. Those who have received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in an institution of the grade of the College of Liberal Arts of the University; and

II. Those who, having a good English education, wish to extend it and to obtain a thorough knowledge of the Word of God, and of the best way of imparting it to others.

Special Design of Each Department.

I. School of English.

There are many pious young men who have neither the time nor the means to obtain a classical education, but yet have a desire and the ability to be very useful in the ministry. It is the special design of this department to afford to such an opportunity to become well acquainted with the English language and its literature.

The work of this department is divided into four years: Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior. In order to graduate, a student is required to complete the studies of the first three years; though he may, with the advice and consent of the professor, substitute the Senior studies for the Junior. A student who reads, writes and spells well, and who has a good knowledge of English Grammar, can enter the Freshman class.

FRESHMAN.—In this class the student is thoroughly drilled in the principles of syntax and grammar, and in the leading facts of English history.

SOPHOMORE.—During this year special attention is given to rhetoric and composition. As fast as principles are learned they are practically applied in oral and written exercises. The aim will be to teach the student to know and appreciate good English, and to train him to express his thoughts with clearness, precision and force. Great stress is laid upon the writing of essays, which are required throughout the year. The history of English literature is also studied during this year, the aim being to make a survey of the whole field as a preparation for the more critical study of the following year.

JUNIOR.—This year is devoted to the critical study of literature. The first term is given to the study of prose masterpieces. These selections furnish a basis for a clear study of English prose style. The second term is devoted to poetry under the main divisions of epic, lyric and dramatic. Special attention is given to the drama of Shakespeare. Every effort is made to cultivate a taste for good literature, and all students are encouraged to do as large an amount of parallel reading as possible.

SENIOR.—This year's work is designed to be an introduction to a more thorough and comprehensive study of English philology. A close study is made of selections from old and middle English. Special attention is given to the complex elements that enter into the vocabulary of English, and may difficulties in the grammar and syntax of modern English are simplified. The attempt is made to emphasize the fact that the English language and English literature have been a gradual growth, and that to study them intelligently one must study them historically. It is thought that this course will prove especially helpful to those who expect to teach English.

II. School of Sacred History and Evidences of Christianity.

The design of this department is twofold: first, to lay a a solid foundation in the knowledge of the historical facts of the Bible for all subsequent advances in Biblical study; and second, to make the student familiar with a large amount of material suitable for discourses and illustrations. Incidentally, the faith of the student is strengthened by making him acquainted with the actual contents of the Bible.

To attain the ends just stated, the course of study in Sacred History is more extended than in other colleges of like character. It includes all the historical books of both the Old Testament and the New, together with all the historical information to be gleaned from the other sacred books, and much subsidiary information found in secular history.

The method of instruction is by lectures, and these are followed by recitations in which the matter of the lectures and of the text is reproduced by the student. Every book is distributed into its natural divisions of parts, sections and paragraphs, all of which are studied both separately and connectedly, so that when a book is completed its whole structure and design are understood. As far as may be, all obscure passages are made clear, and apparent discrepances are reconciled. Special attention is given to geography and topography, and for the purpose of illustrating these topics, the department is furnished with a first-class stereopticon, and a set of slides representing in large and brilliant pictures the localities in which the events of the sacred narrative transpired.

The Freshman year is devoted to the study of the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges and Ruth. The Law of Moses is set forth systematically. This is both important in itself, and indispensable to the proper understanding of many passages in the later books of the Bible. The statutes of the Law, both civil and religious, are properly classified according to the distinctions employed in modern statute books.

The studies of the Sophomore year cover a much neglected, but exceedingly important portion of Sacred History. No part of the Bible furnishes so many illustrations of the divine government and of the practical working of sin and redemption among men. The preacher familiar with it has an inexhaustible fund from which to draw while enforcing the claims of religion on mankind.

The members of the Junior class are required to memorize the text carefully, except in a few passages, so that they may always have it at command. They study the matter and structure of each gospel separately, so as to appreciate its distinctive peculiarities; and then they combine the information contained in all by means of a review, in which the events are considered in their chronological order, so far as this can be ascertained. The character and claims of Jesus are kept constantly in view.

The Senior class studies the development and spread of the Church as given in Acts of Apostles, the controversial questions which have arisen in connection with its teaching, the chronology of the book, and the historical matter found in the Epistles.

The course in Evidences is in part coincident with that in Sacred History; for throughout the latter course much attention is given to the internal marks of the genuineness and authenticity of the several books, and to the support of their representations which is found in contemporary history.

In addition to this, the last term of the Senior year in this school is devoted to the study of the text, canon, credibility and inspiration of the New Testament books; and two lectures a week are given throughout the Senior year on the same features of the books of the Old Testament. In this course the leading objections to the Bible urged by infidels are duly considered, and the principal questions raised in the course of modern criticism pass under review.

III. School of Sacred Literature.

In this department the student of the English Scriptures obtains a knowledge of Christian doctrine and the principles of Biblical interpretation. In its Classical Course he receives instruction in the Hebrew language and in Greek exegesis.

In the Sophomore year thorough instruction is given in the whole scheme of redemption as taught in the Holy Scriptures, followed by lectures on Ecclesiastical History, including that of doctrines, schisms and sects, from the death of Christ till the present time.

The Junior year is devoted to hermeneutics. In the application of the principles of interpretation there are two distinct features; first, the exegetical analysis of the Scriptures into sections, paragraphs, elements of thought, sub-elements, etc.; and second, exegetical discussion at the end of paragraphs containing words or expressions which demand additional explanation. In these processes free use is made of the assistance afforded by the labors of such exegetes as Meyer, Tholuck, Alford, Lange, Bengel and others. At the same time the student is carefully guarded against all deference to authorities that would preclude an independent examination of the text itself, and an unbiased application of the principles of hermeneutics, by which all alike must be governed.

The Senior year is spent in fitting the preacher for his life work. This includes the preparation and delivery of sermons, discussions of topics, pastoral work, choice of books, etc.; in a word, the whole subject of homiletics.

IV. School of Philosophy.

The purpose of this department is to make the preacher thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the human intellect; to furnish him with the weapons to be used in defending the faith and assailing the strongholds of error; and to show him how to lay open the secret springs of the heart and will so as to lead both to the obedience of the Gospel. There is a philosophy, falsely so called, that in many places is sapping the foundations of religion; and the preacher of to-day must be able to meet the assailants in their own way, as they secretly as well as openly work their approaches to the citadel of divine truth. He can do this only by understanding his Bible on the one hand and the human mind on the other. The information and mental discipline acquired in this department are in utility to the preacher second only to his knowledge of the Word of God.

Vocal Music and Elocution.

It has been the habit of the College from the beginning to furnish to its students instruction in vocal music and in elocution, and much has been accomplished in this way; but for want of funds no regular teachers have been appointed. These departments have been placed annually under the charge of competent teachers: the classes are at present voluntary, and a small fee is charged for the instruction given in each class.

Miscellanea.

Admission.

1. The applicant must be at least sixteen years of age.

2. He must present satisfactory evidence of good Christian character.

3. He must be prepared to enter the Freshman Classes in English, Mathematics and Natural Science in the College of Liberal Arts.

These requirements are strictly enforced.

Discipline.

It is expected that students in this college will govern themselves. Strict Christian deportment is required of all. Whoever fails of this, is promptly removed from the institution.

No student is allowed to have more than two appointments a month to preach.

Any student, the average of whose daily recitations in any study is not less than ninety, may be excused from the term examination and from any other general examination in that study.

Accommodations and Expenses.

Boarding can be obtained in private families at from $3.00 to $4.00 per week, including all expenses except washing. But students can board in a club at from $1.50 to $2.00 per week, not including washing, fuel and lights. For the accommodation of our students, we have the exclusive use of three college halls on the campus, whose forty rooms have been comfortably fitted up for their occupancy. Each occupant of a room is required to share with his room-mates the expense of furnishing it. But this is made light by the fact that the expense is incurred but once, and that the furniture can always be sold when no longer needed. No rooms can be engaged by new students before matriculation.

The annual expense of students who occupy rooms in the Halls, may be set down as follows:

College Fees	$15.00
Room Rent	10.00
Club Fees (payable weekly)	70.00
Washing, Fuel, Lights	20.00
Books, Stationery, etc.	20.00
Incidentals	5.00
Total	$140.00

The classes of the College of the Bible are taught in the same building with those of the College of Liberal Arts. Our students are admitted without charge to any of the classes of that college; and thus an opportunity is afforded them of prosecuting literary and scientific studies along with their study of the Word of God. They have free access to the libraries of both colleges. The literary societies of this college, the Philothean and the Phileusebian, afford their members ample opportunity for self-improvement.

It is earnestly desired that all who intend to enter the College be present at the opening of the session.

College of Law.*

Course of Instruction.

I. School of Equity, Jurisprudence and the Law of Contracts.

PROFESSOR HUNT.

JUNIOR CLASS—Smith on Contracts.
SENIOR CLASS—Adams' Equity.

*This college, which closed in 1879 after an existence of fourteen years, in which time it had a hundred and fifty-eight graduates, was reopened in 1892 too late for announcement in the last catalogue of the University. There is a good prospect of a much larger attendance during the next session.

II. School of Common Law, and Real and Personal Property.

PROFESSOR FALCONER.

JUNIOR CLASS—Blackstone's Commentaries.

SENIOR CLASS—Kent's Commentaries; Williams on Real and Personal Property.

III. School of Evidence, Pleading and Practice.

PROFESSOR SHELBY.

JUNIOR CLASS—Stephens on Pleading.

SENIOR CLASS—Starkey on Evidence; Chitty on Pleading; Bliss on Code Pleading.

IV. School of Constitutional, Mercantile and Criminal Law.

PROFESSOR ALLEN.

JUNIOR CLASS—Smith's Mercantile Law; Cooley's Principles of Constitutional Law.

SENIOR CLASS—Harris on Criminal Law.

The design of the College of Law is to provide a complete and thorough course of instruction, except in merely local law and practice, for young men preparing for the bar in any part of the United States.

Instruction is given by lectures, with examinations on them, or by recitations, with familiar expositions by the professors.

Moot Courts, presided over by the professors, will be held regularly.

The course of study requires two years for its completion. Applicants will be admitted to the Senior class upon passing a satisfactory examination in the Junior course, or its equivalent.

The diploma of this college, granted only after a satisfactory written examination, confers the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and is a license to practice law in the courts of Kentucky.

Matriculates of this college can attend, without charge, the classes of the College of Liberal Arts.

Commercial College.

Faculty.

WILBUR R. SMITH, Presiding Officer,
EPHRAIM W. SMITH, Associate Principal.

The principals are assisted by twelve instructors.

Matriculates.

The number of matriculates from June 1, 1892, to June 1, 1893, was 764. The number of graduates during that time was 344.

Course of Instruction.

The course of instruction is unusually full. It includes Bookkeeping in its application to professional and official business and to the various forms of merchandising, compound company, partnership, commission, joint stock, railroading, steamboating, banking, milling, real estate and insurance, furnacing and mining.

The thorough instruction given in banking is an important feature of this college. This part of the course includes the use of ten books, with the necessary accompaniment of business and legal forms.

Both class and individual instruction is given in Commercial Arithmetic in its various features of interest, discount, premium, profit and loss, percentage, averaging accounts, equation of payments, proportion of taxes, insurance and measurements.

Students are trained in mercantile correspondence and in the use of checks, drafts, exchanges, deeds, leases, mortgages, agreements and other forms of business paper.

Frequent lectures on Commercial Law, given by the Associate Principal, explain the law of partnership, contracts and the settling of estates.

The whole course of instruction is eminently practical in aim and methods. The drilling that the students receive in the principles of business is accompanied and followed by their practical application in organizing and conducting business, at first simple, but afterwards of the most intricate and complicated character. As a final test of proficiency the student is required to merge a set of individual single entry books into individual double entry, this into partnership, and this again into joint stock.

Special courses in shorthand, typewriting and telegraphy may be taken either with or without a general course. The instruction in these branches is not confined to the immediate subjects, but includes a liberal range of collateral matters. The instructors are competent teachers of practical experience in tneir respective departments.

The Commercial College has two general courses, the Merchants' Course and the Full Business Course. The former requires from five to seven weeks to complete it, the latter from eight to twelve weeks. A separate charge is made for instruction in phonography, typewriting, and telegraphy.

The session continues throughout the year. Students can enter at any time. There is no class system, but individual instruction, each pupil advancing as rapidly as he may be able.

The hours of work are from 9 A. M. to 12 M., $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 P. M., and 7 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ P. M.

Matriculates of this college can attend without charge, for the remainder of the session after the completion of their business course, the classes of the College of Liberal Arts or of the Academy.

General Miscellanea.

Sessions, Terms, Commencements.

The session of the College of Liberal Arts, the College of the Bible, the College of Law and the Academy begins on the second Monday of September. The session of the Commercial College continues through the year.

In the College of Liberal Arts, the College of the Bible and the Academy, the session is divided into two equal terms.

The Commencement of the College of Law is on the fourth Thursday of April; that of the College of Liberal Arts on the second Thursday of June, on which day the session of the Academy also closes; that of the College of the Bible on Tuesday next preceding the second Thursday of June.

Young Women.

The College of Liberal Arts, the College of Law and the Commercial College are open to both sexes. The College of Liberal Arts receives only such young women as students as are of suitable age and as are prepared for the Freshman Class in the School of Mathematics or of English. This will not preclude them from having some of their classes in the Academy.

As the University is not yet provided with a boarding house for young women, only those will be received as students who have or can find a home in the city or vicinity where they will be under a protecting and controlling family care, and those who are of sufficient age and experience to be safely left to themselves. Parents and others who desire to send young women to the University are requested to communicate with the President, who will give all desired information.

Matriculation.

A student, upon his arrival, should report promptly to the Presiding Officer of the college he desires to enter, with his testimonials of character and standing. He should, as early as practicable, secure suitable board and lodging. After successful examination and payment of fees, he will be entitled to matriculate. Fail ure to observe these regulations may bar his admission.

Fees.

MATRICULATION—College of Liberal Arts, $15.00; College of Law, $10.00; Academy, $15.00; Commercial College, free.

TUITION—College of Liberal Arts, tuition coupon or $2.00; College of Law, $50.00; Commercial College, Merchant's Course, $35.00; Full Diploma Course, $55.00; Shorthand, $35.00; Typewriting, $20.00; Shorthand and Type writing, $50.00: Academy, tuition coupon or $2.00.

LABORATORY—For Chemicals used in the Junior class. $5.00; in the Senior class, $10.00. In the Junior class a deposit of $3.00 and in the Senior of $5.00 is required to cover damage to apparatus.

GRADUATION—Bachelor's degree, $10.00; Master's degree, $10.00; certificate from any one school, $3.00. From the fee charged for a Bachelor's degree deduction is allowed of payments made for certificates to an amount not exceeding ten dollars.

For fees in the College of the Bible see page 44.

All fees are required in advance.

No tuition fee is required in the College of Liberal Arts of any student in indigent circumstances that has had one year's experience in teaching, and that intends to make that his profession.

Government and Discipline.

The government of the University, administered by the Presidents and Faculties, aims to maintain such a discipline among the students as will conduce to the good order and prosperity of the institution. The rule of discipline is parental, conducted not with severity, but with strictness. There is no forbearance with evil; every element of disorder, as soon as discovered, is at once removed. The Presidents and Professors bear themselves toward the students as friends.

This kind of government has borne its good fruits. The University enjoys an enviable reputation for the excellent character of its students and for the general good order pervading it.

Religious and Moral Culture.

Every recitation day of the Colleges of Liberal Arts and the Bible and of the Academy is opened with worship in the chapels. The Professors are present, and attendance on the part of the students is obligatory.

The Bible in English and in the original tongues is a text-book in the University.

Students are expected to attend religious services in the churches of the city on Sunday. A large number of them are regularly present at week-day prayer-meetings, and many are members of Bible classes that look especially to their religious and spiritual instruction and training.

A College Young Men's Christian Association and a Students' Missionary Society contribute also to awaken and cultivate a religious interest among the students.

A large majority of the students are professing Christians.

Public Lectures.

The Kentucky University Lecture Association, which has been in successful operation for several years, contributes much to the intellectual culture and enjoyment of the students. A course of lectures is arranged every session, which brings to the University some of the best lecturing talent of the land. Only such teachers of the platform are invited by the Association as honor and advocate the Christian religion. These lectures have thus far met with remarkable success, and now constitute one of the permanent attractions of the University.

Location.

The College of Liberal Arts, the College of the Bible and the Academy occupy the Transylvania grounds and buildings.

Lexington, situated in the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, is noted for its healthfulness and its superior social and religious influences. It affords to students boarding in good private families, with excellent opportunities for culture and refinement.

Libraries.

The law, the medical and the miscellaneous libraries of the University, comprising about twelve thousand volumes, are open to all its students. The large and valuable library of the city of Lexington is accessible upon the payment of a small fee; its reading-room is free.

Apparatus and Museum.

The University has ancient and modern wall maps, a large and valuable collection of chemical, philosophical and astronomical apparatus, and a museum containing an extensive collection of anatomical, geological and mineral specimens and objects of Natural History, all well adapted to the purpose of illustration and instruction in its schools of literature and science.

Societies.

The literary societies of the College of Liberal Arts are three, the Cecropian, the Periclean and the Ossolian, the last the young women's society; of the College of the Bible two, the Philothean and the Phileusebian. They have their halls and libraries, and their weekly exercises add to the facilities afforded for practice in composition, elocution and discussion.

Gymnasium.

The Association of Alumni of the University has undertaken the work of raising means for the erection of a gymnasium. A second appropriation, made by the Board of Curators at its last meeting, increases the amount secured for this purpose to near ten thousand dollars. It may, therefore, be confidently expected that this means of promoting the physical health and development of our students will soon be added to the facilities already afforded by the ample grounds of the University.

Boarding.

A student can select his house for boarding and lodging, subject in all cases to the approval of the Faculty. He can not, however, board or lodge in any house in which intoxicating liquors are sold, in which card playing or billiard playing is practiced, or in which the rules of good order and decorum are, in any respect, disregarded. In private families, the weekly cost of boarding, fuel, light, and the use of furnished rooms, varies from $3.00 to $5 00.

Bequests.

Institutions of learning have very often received large donations from bequests. There are, therefore, subjoined here general and special forms of bequests, both as incentives and directions to such friends of the University as may desire to remember it liberally in their wills.

Forms of Bequest.

General.

I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of .....dollars, to be applied at the discretion of the Curators for the general purposes of the University.

Special.

I give and bequeath to Kentucky University the sum of ..... dollars, to be invested by the Curators as an endowment for the support of (a professorship or some other object designated in the bequest).

President's Annual Report.

(Abstract.)

Gentlemen of the Board of Curators:

It gives me pleasure to lay before you my report for the session just closing.

The number of matriculates for the present session in the College of Liberal Arts is 222; in the Academy 34; in all 256. There has been for years, with slight variation, a steady and marked increase in the attendance of students in the University, shared alike by all its colleges that were in operation.

The College of the Bible the present collegiate year matriculated 187 students, with 24 in the Senior Class. The Commercial College since last June records 764 matriculates, and has given full diplomas to 344 students.

The Law College was opened again last September with a class of 10. Its four professors have shown a very commendable interest in the success of the college. For years constant inquiries about this college have been coming from abroad, as well as from near home. It would be very gratifying to see this branch of the University enter upon a course of permanent success.

The entire number of students in all branches of the University for the present collegiate year is 1,211.

During last session the Faculty of the College of Liberal Arts, following the example of many of the best universities and colleges of our land, drew up a scheme of substitutes in the A. B. and B. S. courses. This scheme, with the reasons for it, was laid before you at your last annual meeting, and you promptly adopted it. I regard this as a wise step forward. Of the sixteen candidates for the degree of A. B. this session, twelve have taken advantage of this provision.

The Executive Committee, on the recommendation of the Faculty, has established a regular course for the degree of Civil Engineering, with a Bachelor's diploma.

In the universities of the Old World, and in many of the best institutions of our own country, there is a special literary course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Literature.

There are many persons whose inclinations and aims lead them to pursue, in a special sense, literary studies—less of mathematics and ancient languages than is embraced in the A. B. course, substituting for these the modern languages. This very proper demand should be satisfied.

The Faculty have given much time and careful attention to this question. When the course was finally decided on, and its scheme of studies arranged, it was submitted to the Executive Committee, by which, after due consideration, it was approved.

The course is as full and as strong, and will require as much time to complete it, as either the A. B. or the B. S. course. There is also arranged, in connection with it, an additional amount of studies leading to the higher degree of Master of Literature.

At your session in June, 1889, with hearty unanimity, you adopted the recommendation of the Faculty to receive women into the College of Liberal Arts on the same conditions and with the same privileges as men. This praiseworthy step we have had no cause to regret. The Commercial College had already opened its doors to women, and the Law College has promptly shown the same enlightened and liberal spirit. Women can now enter all the colleges of the University. I am glad to say to you that the public everywhere applauded this action of Kentucky University.

There are thirty-eight young women in our list of matriculates this year; one of them is among the candidates for the degree of A. B.; others will reach the goal of graduation ere long. The Law College had also one young woman among its students.

Of the 187 students in the College of the Bible this session, 148 were in the classes of the College of Liberal Arts and of the Academy. It is notable, and a good sign, that there is year by year an increasing tendency on the part of the students of this college to enter the advanced classes of the College of Liberal Arts. In our present Senior Class of 21, there are nine graduates of the College of the Bible. These are all ministerial students, who now go forth as graduates of both these colleges.

One of our candidates for the B. S. degree graduated yesterday, in the College of the Bible.

The Executive Committee, as you will see from their report, has decided that the entrance fees in the College of Liberal Arts shall be increased from twelve to seventeen dollars for the entire session. This is a very moderate advance. It has for years been a surprise to the community that these fees in Kentucky University are so much lower than in any other institution in our land of equal and even inferior rank. The necessity of retaining them as they have been in the past is no longer upon us.

The income of the University is far too small to meet its wants. Every proper effort should be made to increase our pecuniary resources. We need a larger body of teachers to meet the constantly increasing call for more extended collegiate and academic instruction. There is also a pressing want in other respects in the institution—in apparatus, in all those conveniences in the class-rooms which the highest order of teaching demands. The scien tific department notably needs larger facilities. More teachers, more room, more and better apparatus are what we need.

The amount secured thus far for the building of a gymnasium is $6,870.00; the amount required is $10,000.00. It is hoped that this sum will soon be obtained, and that within the coming year this much needed addition to the University will be erected and fitted out, ready for use.

Report of the Several Schools.

In the School of Greek there were in all 110 students, divided into six classes.

The Senior class is confined to Biblical Greek, studying in the first term the Septuagint, in the second term the New Testament. Lectures are given in this class on the peculiarities of the Septuagint and New Testament Greek, and the text is exegetically studied. This will become an important class with the more nobly ambitious students for the ministry.

The New Testament is also studied regularly once a week, one term in the Freshman and one in the Sophomore year, making together about forty recitations.

Grecian history is studied in the Freshman and Sophomore years.

In the School of Latin there were altogether 163 students, distributed into seven classes. Roman history is studied in the Sophomore year.

The School of Mathematics numbered in all 260 students, divided into eight classes.

These numbers include the members of the Academic classes in Greek, Latin and Mathematics.

The School of English had in it a very large number of students, 296 in all, reciting in six classes. This is exclusive of the two English grammar classes in the Academic course.

In the School of Natural Science there are three classes, with an attendance this session of 174 students. During the first term of the Junior year, the class spends one hour in recitation and one hour in laboratory work.

The School of Sacred History extends through but one year, and has therefore but one class. The number of students in this was 29. Matriculates of the College of Liberal Arts may, when it is more convenient, take this course in the College of the Bible; several of them make use of this privilege every session.

The School of Philosophy has in it two classes—the Junior and the Senior. There were in these classes 33 students from the College of Liberal Arts, and a larger number from the College of the Bible.

There are four classes in the School of Modern Languages—Junior and Senior German, and Junior and Senior French. In the former were 36 students; in the latter 32. These classes may now be used as substitutes for certain classes in the course for the degree of A. B.

The School of Civil Engineering had in it two students, both of whom were Seniors.

Academy.

Professor Ellett, Principal, had three Academic classes: Latin Grammar, 71 students reciting in two sections; and the first Greek Grammar class, 44 students. He taught also one division of the Freshman class in Mathematics, 34 students. With his class, as Professor of Sacred History, numbering 29, he had in his five classes 178 students.

Professor Conley, First Assistant, had the Arithmetic and Algebra classes, 91 students reciting in two sections; and the second Greek Grammar class, 22 students. As Adjunct Professor of English he taught two sections of the Freshman class in that school, together 113 students. The entire number in his five classes was 226. A large proportion of these students was from the College of the Bible.

Mr. Calhoun, Second Assistant in the Academy, taught six classes: two classes in English Grammar and United States History, 20 students each; Arithmetic, 31; third Latin Grammar class, 14; Modern Geography and Study of Words, 20; Physical Geography, 15—120 students in all.

The Academic classes all recite five times a week.

Religious Societies.

There are three voluntary religious associations in the University: the Students' Missionary Society, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association. These societies indicate the presence of a strong religious influence in the University, and are accomplishing much good among the students, the great majority of whom are professing Christians, many of them exemplary in their profession.

Respectfully submitted,

CHAS. LOUIS LOOS, President.
